$29M budget

Budget highlights: Assistant TM, start-up for light department

by Arlene Surprenant
As he explained that next year's budget could be looked on as "a positive challenge" in a time of fiscal stress, Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski unveiled his recommended budget of $29,443,069 for FY 1988 before the Wilmington Board of Selectmen Monday night.

The challenge, he said, comes in trying to manage a growing municipality with limits on revenues and uncontrollable increases in fixed costs.

According to Stapczynski, the fiscal '88 budget, which represents a 7.9 percent increase over the '87 appropriation of $27,273,238, reflects a decrease of $150,000 in revenue sharing funds and diminished local aid.

It also includes several "drastic" increases in fixed costs in the area of tipping fees to NESWC, sewer expenses to the Mass Water Resources Authority, the Maturing Debt and Interest Account, and the insurance account.

In outlining his $15,085,468 budget for town departments, Stapczynski called for the creation of two new positions for next year.

He received the wholehearted support of selectmen for an Assistant Town Manager ($30,937) to help in the daily administration of town hall departments and to cut down on response time for citizen complaints. Stapczynski also set aside $20,655 for a Preventative Maintenance Technician who would do minor repairs and maintain HVAC and other equipment at the renovated high school.

Other priorities in the town budget include a continued roadway maintenance program ($36,000), replacement of overhead doors at the DPW garage ($45,000), continued expansion of the Merrimack Valley Library Consortium ($35,000), new radios and computer expenses for the police department ($24,750), and a Power Rescue System for the fire department ($15,500).

Stapczynski recommended an education budget of $11,557,714, which reflects a 6.4 percent increase over the total appropriation for FY'87. Of this total, $10,797,114 is slated for the Wilmington School Department, $748,600 for the Shawheen Tech, and $12,000 for the vocational training of four students at the Essex Agricultural School.

Besides appropriations to replace rolling stock in several town departments and to purchase truck scales to monitor solid waste sent to NESWC, perhaps the largest single money item in a warrant article is to establish a town light department.

Stapczynski told selectmen he is seeking $125,000 to get started on the second step in breaking away from the Reading Municipal Light Dept. The funds cover negotiations with RMLD, valuation and engineering studies to set up a town department (Wilmington Municipal Electric Department), and legal assistance.

"The more I see the numbers and the possibilities, the more I'm a believer," said Stapczynski. Selectmen seemed equally determined to pursue this course of action and said they hoped voters would support the article.

In other articles, the school department is requesting the sum of $66,000 for capital outlay and PBC is seeking $50,000 to pay for feasibility studies for several town projects.

To help fund the proposed budget, Stapczynski sees an estimated $11,025,557 in available funds for FY 1988 and an estimated tax levy limit of $18,417,512. The FY 1988 unclassified tax rate is estimated to be $17.80. The total valuation for the town is estimated to be $1,034,469,000, an "extraordinary achievement" Stapczynski noted Monday.

The recommended budget will now go to the Wilmington Finance Committee for review and analysis in preparation for the annual town meeting April 25.

Mitchell Spiris dies unexpectedly

Wilmington School Committee member Mitchell Spiris died unexpectedly early Sunday morning after being stricken with a heart attack.

Mr. Spiris, 67 years old, was a retired assistant superintendent of schools in the Lexington school system. He was appointed to the Wilmington School Committee in 1985 to fill the unexpired term of the late John Brooks. He was subsequently elected to the seat in April, 1986.

He was very active on the school committee, and had been involved in a budget meeting during the day Saturday.

The ambulance was called to the Spiris home at 11:33 p.m. Saturday. He was taken to the Regional Health Center where he was pronounced dead.

His obituary appears on page six.

Vassallo appeal being heard this week

by Arlene Surprenant
Officer Robert Vassallo of the Wilmington Police Department is in the process of appealing a decision rendered by Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski last July. The decision, to demote Vassallo from sergeant to patrolman, stemmed from several charges against him, including the use of excessive force against a prisoner.

The appeal hearing before the State Civil Service Commission began Monday, January 26 in Boston's McCormack Building and is expected to last all week, said Vassallo last Thursday. He is once again being represented by Jeffrey Fisher of Malden. Town Counsel Alan Altman is representing the town.

Vassallo told the Town Crier he expects Fisher will present witnesses and facts to explain what actually happened during the incident involving Patrick McNally. He said he expects Fisher will destroy the credibility of the town's witnesses and establish the credibility of his own.

In Vassallo's estimation, the "major thrust" of the case against him was the use of excessive force. Though he admitted he did strike McNally, Vassallo still maintains he acted in self-defense and is optimistic the appeal board will see it his way.

If he wins his appeal, Vassallo said, he expects to be reinstated with back pay. The sessions are open to the public.

Fire in the storm

Wilmington firefighters had to clear a hydrant on Salem Street near the North Intermediate School during Thursday night's snowstorm. A tree limb, laden with snow, fell and pulled wires from the side of a house at 314 Salem St. Wires in the house began to burn, causing minor damage. (Photo by Dave Fitzgerald)

Inclusionary policy may not be feasible

by Arlene Surprenant
After learning that the inclusionary housing policy, to create low cost homes in Wilmington, may not be feasible as a bylaw, members of the Affordable Housing Task Force turned their attention to the use of town owned land for scattered site homes.

Task force chairman Jim Stewart told members last week that the proposed bylaw would require too much technical work on it to make it legally acceptable. Instead, he said, he backs a plan to turn several town-owned parcels over to builders for one dollar each. In turn, developers would build homes and sell them to the town for $65,000. Each home would have a deed restriction built in at the time of sale to keep the homes in the affordable price range.

"I, personally, don't see any other way to go," Stewart said, explaining that such a route could only be pursued once the cataloguing of town owned land is complete, by April, 1988.

Several other members went along with the idea, saying it would keep the homes scattered throughout town.

The biggest obstacle seen was obtaining the approval of town meeting voters. However, said

Stewart, the plan would allow voters a say in the process.

Though he agreed with the idea, Vaughn Surprenant urged caution.

"Let's not panic and do everything in one year then look five years down the road and say, oh my god, what have we done," he said.

In other business, members learned it would be too costly to move the Webber House to the two town owned sites as originally proposed. Members explored several options in hopes of saving the home from demolition for a low to moderate income family. However, with a time constraint on them, members expressed doubt they could come up with another solution in time.

To all my friends,

Rocco issues statement on decision not to run

Rocco DePasquale, chairman of the Wilmington Board of Selectmen, has issued the following statement relative to his decision not to seek re-election to that board.

To the Voters and Board of Selectmen of Wilmington.

Because of the many calls I have received from Wilmington friends and voters concerning my decision not to seek reelection to the Board of Selectmen, I am taking this opportunity to explain further the reasons for that decision. It was made after careful consideration of my responsibilities to my family and to my business obligations, and also the complete confidence I have in my colleagues on the Board of Selectmen.

Over the past two years, I have incurred substantial financial obligations and additional responsibilities outside of town government. These are imposing such an added demand upon my time that I will be unable to devote sufficient attention to my responsibilities as a Wilmington Selectman in the months ahead. It would be unfair to my wife and family, and to the townspeople, to subtract from the attention I should devote to them.

I have enjoyed serving the Town of Wilmington and I believe that my departure from public service will be temporary. I took forward to future opportunities to work with the town and the people of Wilmington, whose support I have deeply appreciated.

In particular, I thank the town officials and employees for their cooperation and assistance during my nine years as Selectman. I am proud of the manner in which the town government has overcome the problems imposed by Proposition 2 1/2. I am confident that the town is now enjoined to achieve success in such projects as the improvement of Wilmington Center, establishing our town municipal power company, and providing affordable housing for both our older residents and our young people who want to continue to live in Wilmington.

Thank you for your support and your continued determination to keep Wilmington a better place in which to live.

Respectfully yours,
Rocco V. DePasquale

Fifth Anniversary Mass

A Fifth Anniversary Mass will be held in the Memory of the late Josephine A. McCoy, on the request of her family, to be held at St. Thomas's Church on Saturday, January 31, 1987 at 8 a.m. Her loved ones include her husband Ronald, her sons Michael, Vincent, Robert and Ronald, Jr., her daughter Deborah, also her mother, Louise Miceli and her brother State Representative James R. Miceli. Her memory still continues on in the hearts of her family.

At Rotary
meeting

Tewksbury Rotarian Mico Kaufman talks with Fr. Bill Smith following the Rotary meeting.

Fr. Smith talks on South Africa

Speakers at a Rotary Club luncheon have half an hour to talk. They start, under ordinary circumstance, at 1 p.m. and at 1:30 p.m. the presiding officer hits the bell.

The Rev. Bill Smith, of the Oblate Fathers at St. William's Church had that happen to him at the Tewksbury Rotary Club on January 21, but no one paid any attention. Half a dozen Rotarians and Fr. Smith continued for another 15 minutes in a polygonal conversation, to talk about South Africa.

South Africa, he began, is the only country in the world with a "human stud book." Everything you do in your life is completely oriented by the circumstances of your birth.

There are five million whites, twenty-five million blacks, less than one million Indians, and about two and a half million coloreds - people of mixed races. If a person is born white he has one style of life. If a person is born black everything is different.

Ten miles from where he was stationed was an Africa Zulu nation. There black people were killing black people.

There are areas such as that, set aside for the black people. And there are areas where the white people live, and the blacks must leave at night.

The whites are 20 percent of the people and they own 80 percent of the land. The message to the coloreds, to the blacks, and to the Indians is: "Do as you are told. We know what is best for you."

The doctors in the hospitals. They all pass the same examinations. There are doctors from all four races.

There is one pay scale for the white doctors. There is another for the Indians. There is a third for the mixed breeds and there is a fourth pay scale for the blacks. It is the lowest of all.

There are millions of people who are caught in this - and all they can say is "We want peace and justice!"

Commercial groups have tried to change the system. Those people have told the whites: "Don't Do it!"

The response is: "We are doing it!"

The best known person is the black, Mandela. He has been 26 years in prison. The government has offered him all sorts of carrots but he refuses to give in. He is regarded as a revolutionary, and a terrorist.

He is a revolutionary in the same way that such men as George Washington and John Adams were.

To live in South Africa, one of these days--it is going to be terrible!

From that point on Fr. Smith was engaged in a multi party conversation. There were Rotarians who knew of problems in other African nations. They wanted to compare notes with Fr. Smith.

There are people in South Africa, Smith said, who are working for a better place to live. There are people who want to see that the National (black, mostly, ed.) party could be in power.

"There are people there who want to talk to us, but, because they cannot, they will accept help and arms from Russia and other communist sources - because they cannot talk to us!"

"Those 25 millions? When they do win - are they going to have a softness in their hearts for us?"

"At the present time I don't see any peaceful transition."

Three groups share old Town Hall

Musicians will be holding forth, in the old Wilmington Town Hall, come the first of May or thereabouts. There will also be some people wielding paint brushes - not the kind with which to paint houses, but the kind used to produce pictures, under the general name of 'Arts.'

The music will be in what used to be the Chief Assessor's office. The painting will be in the same wing of the building, in what used to be the office of the assessors' clerks, etc.

T.M. Buzz Stapczynski, a few weeks ago decided that three municipal groups should share the building. The school committee had charge, so Buzz had to wait until that committee relinquished control in mid-November.

The Art Centre for Wilmington is to be the principal tenant of the former town hall. The Community Schools Council will share what used to be the selectmen's meeting room with the Art Centre, as a joint office. The Community Schools will also have a large share of the cellar to be used as space for arts and similar studies.

The dividing walls in the cellar on the "cemetery side" are to be removed, for the use of the Community Schools. On the other side of the cellar, in the corner next to Middlesex Avenue the Wilmington Emergency Management Agency will have its headquarters.

What was once the worship center of the Free Will Baptist Church of Wilmington 140 years ago, and for the past half century or so has been the town hall and office space will become the Exhibit Hall, among other things. The Wilmington Art Centre will allow local artists to exhibit their work for a period of time up to one month long. Exhibits of art have not always been that easy in Wilmington.

Both the Art Centre and the Community Schools are looking for suitable desks for each organization, to use in their headquarters. The school desks which have recently been discarded are too small for business purposes.

Money was voted for the Art Centre by the Wilmington Town Meeting last April. Because the Centre had to await a decision on the use of the old Town Hall it was unable to get started.

About 15 persons were there on January 24 to start cleaning the old town hall. Steve Berghaus, a school custodian, brought a long ladder, and started a cleaning process of cleaning the ceiling, while others washed paint work, etc. The Emergency Management Agency was able to supply electric power, the connection with the Reading Municipal Light having been cut off.

Adele Passmore of the Art Centre assured this paper that the big tents, used in the summer time for art exhibits, are now safely stored in the basement of what used to be Wilmington Town Hall.

In the old Town Hall

Annette Campbell has been hard at work in the former Wilmington Town Hall, preparing it as the new arts center.

For many, the 1986 IRA contribution will be their LAST CHANCE for full deductibility!

STARTING WITH THE 1987 TAX YEAR...

A person filing an individual return with an adjusted gross income of less than $25,000, and a couple filing a joint return with an adjusted gross income of less than $40,000, can continue to make deductible IRA contributions. Deductibility will then phase out for individuals with incomes between $25,000 and $35,000, and for couples with incomes between $40,000 and $50,000. For example, a married worker with an adjusted gross of $45,000, making an IRA contribution of $2,000, will be able to deduct only $1,000 instead of the full $2,000.

In all cases, the tax-deferred status of IRA investment appreciation remains. Those who are not permitted by the rules to make deductible contributions will still be permitted after-tax contributions to take advantage of the IRA's internal tax-deferred appreciation.

So, if you don't have an IRA, it will pay you to go to your nearest Lowell Five office to open one. And if you have an IRA, be sure you make your 1986 contribution.

It's YOUR Money

WHAT'S DEDUCTIBLE, WHAT'S NOT?

Traditionally, our measure of the value of various financial instruments -- loans, investments, or what ever -- was influenced by deductibility. The rules changed with the Tax Reform act.

Real estate taxes, charitable contributions and local income and property taxes are still deductible if you itemize. Sales taxes are not. Interest on consumer credit is not deductible and investment debt is only deductible up to the amount of your investment income; however this cutback will be phased in over 5 years (it's smart to pay off old high-interest loans first).

Mortgage interest on first and second homes remains deductible UNLESS the amount of the mortgage is higher than the cost of the property and any improvements made to it. The excess mortgage interest is not deductible UNLESS the proceeds are used for medical or educational expenses. Mortgage loans taken out before August 1986 are excepted. It's smart to get accounting advice about these changes from:

Mitch Spiris: A special friend

by Arlene Surprenant

Few men in their lifetime have made as much of an impact as Mitch Spiris. For Mitch was a man who cared deeply. He was a man who was committed, not to causes and what was best for Mitch Spiris, but to education and his fellow human beings.

As we struggle with our shock and grief at his sudden passing, we can't help but be reminded of the impact he has had on our town, and most especially, on our lives.

It was as an educator and vocal member of the Wilmington School Committee that people knew him best. Mitch believed strongly in the creation of a sound educational environment and the best curriculum possible for our children. He helped build confidence in the central administration. At the same time, he helped make the superintendent accountable through the development of an evaluation process which can easily be followed in years to come.

Mitch fought for high standards and refused to yield to pressure or be drawn into counter-productive issues and arguments. He felt the need for a workable teacher recruitment program and higher salaries to bring and keep good teachers in the Wilmington system.

He volunteered to be liaison with the Permanent Building Committee when he discovered there was no one to serve in that capacity. He was a member of the bargaining team which helped negotiate a new teachers' contract and a member of the principal's sub-committee.

Mitch pushed hard for quality education in Wilmington and always put our children first. Mitchell Spiris, without a doubt, represented education at its finest, both in his early years as an administrator in the Lexington school system and as a visible member of the educational community in our town.

At the same time, we saw other sides of the man. We saw the devoted husband, father, and grandfather who took pride in his loving family. We saw a man of warmth and dignity, conscience and integrity. We saw a man who would take the time to listen and a friend who would be there in time of need. We saw, most of all, a gentleman, or, as one member of his committee tearfully put it, "the finest gentleman I've ever known."

Words, at this point, seem so trite. For one who uses them in her profession each day, they don't come easily in describing this very special friend. Mitch, it's been a privilege to know you. You will be sorely missed.

Frankly speaking

by Kevin John Sowyrda

There was a lot of activity outside the Adams Street entrance to the High School that day. Political season 1985 had begun, and a group of candidates were gathering support from those entering a special town meeting at Barrows Auditorium. The group included this writer, who among many that day, had a genuine gleam in his eye at the prospect of public service.

With about four of us rummaging for votes, we were joined suddenly by a man who instantly impressed me as distinguished. With a few decades of educational experience behind him, Mitch Spiris had decided to throw his hat in the ring for the Wilmington School Committee. As he worked his way up the sidewalk, I could instantly sense a personal warmth from this genteel man, and with a firm handshake we began a great friendship that has so suddenly come to an end.

Without any warning, Mitch Spiris passed away, the victim of a heart attack. By Sunday morning the news had spread throughout this small community. Most people were appropriately left speechless. Losing Mitch was like losing a close friend, as he was more than an elected official of the town. For Spiris, his seat on the school committee was not simply a title and position of importance, but the opportunity to work diligently for what his life always represented; education and the welfare of our children.

So it's with great difficulty that we try to deal with losing this man, especially for those who worked with him closely, as had this writer. But no matter how you try to go about it, coming to grips with Mitch no longer being with us will not be an easy task. And it is perhaps that, in and of itself, which is the tribute to the man. The fact that dealing with our loss is a challenge, because of the important role he played in our town government and our personal lives.

So as we try to move on, we can take a look back at what made Mitch stand out in the crowd of Wilmington politics. It was without a doubt his attitude. The man's perception of leadership was not the traditional debates and sparring matches between officials. Instead, he reached out in friendship to everyone he came in contact with. Mitch had the ability to work with many different types of people and to solidify a base of support that he earned through sincerity and good will toward all.

And a part of his success was the man's disposition. Mitch always greeted you with that warm smile that had the effervescence of a rare sincerity. When he asked you how you were and how everything was going, he was not just being polite, but he actually cared and wanted to know.

Mitch Spiris was a family man. He had the type of marriage and parent relationship that all of us should have. With the endless hours of devotion that he showed in attending every meeting possible, he still lived first for that which is most important to any American -- the family.

As to where we go from here, the answer is clear. Let's do what Mitch would have us do. We relish the time we had with him and regret the sudden loss. But we have to come together to continue his efforts which always centered around educational excellence and genuine kindness to everyone.

'My Little Town' -- Another look at winter

By Gaye Smith

January is a likely time to catch the after-holiday blues. Living in New England, every day can change your tune with our roller coaster weather.

Some people in other parts of the country, feel let down after all the holiday excitement. They continue their daily routines, they travel to their jobs, and wait for their tax returns. January, technically is the end of the most festive time of the year; but we live in New England!

The snow has been falling for several weeks now, glistening on our land as if we were being christened by pure white snow for the first time. A virgin snow, what a beautiful blanket to cover our rolling hills during hibernation. And the forest, accepting the snow with such contrast, the limbs on the trees look painted lily white on one side and the other black as coal. Almost like a cast of a natural shadow from the sun. The snow looks so breathtaking even in the smallest nook or cranny. Everywhere you look there's a perfect picture for any postcard or calendar. Snow just wouldn't seem very thrilling falling on endless flat land. It's our great variety of trees, rivers and mountains that carry the weight of our significant snow.

My favorite New England snow scene is a ride down a country road that has not been traveled and the snow doesn't show any signs of stopping. I love the way the monstrous trees holding the heavy snow become an endless archway to your destination. January can conjure a peaceful feeling that can open a door for dreaming and reflecting. You can look around forever and always find a certain tree or cozy home that enchants you. I like to dream of an old fashion horse and buggy ride with a cup of hot apple cider awaiting me at my favorite skating pond.

January is a wonderful time to daydream and to wonder what your goals will be for the seasons to come. You may choose to take up a hobby that you never had time for or joining a health spa, starting up your craft as a small business or think about buying a car come spring. While keeping track of your dreams at the same time you can be making lots of fun memories to look back on. That's right it's time to enjoy the snow. Dig out those ugly snowboots, thermal underwear, fuzzy hat and mittens and plan on getting wet. Call a friend, take the family pet for a walk in the woods down that path that formed so many summers ago and had once taken you to your hide away tree-house. Or take the kids out, round up the neighborhood dogs to pull your toboggan to your favorite hill for sledding.

Sometimes it's nice to enjoy the snow indoors, gazing through the bay window watching the bluejays and cardinals gather at the birdfeeder. Or glance through a photo album of winters past and maybe it will trigger another pose for a snow picture for mom's 1987 Christmas cards.

As the sun sets and family and friends are retiring from sledding or chopping wood, our little town becomes a perfect New England setting. The snow is still coming down in squalls covers the foot steps from the days activities. All that is left to see against the midnight blue falling snow is the aura of candles glowing in the windows, and the smell of birch wood streaming from the chimney tops.

Despite how winter can interfere with our lives and jobs by making roads difficult to travel; just remember how much fun it is to tell the stories of how you enjoyed the snow and how it can bring warmth into your home.

New England snow, enjoy it today for it will be gone tomorrow.

letters to the editor

Dear Larz:

Mitch Spiris was one of those rare people whom you meet so infrequently during your life. A person who always managed to take the time to listen to your problems, always managed to give you his honest opinion even if it was not what you wanted to hear, and always tried his best to remind you of the silver lining lurking just behind every cloud.

The people of Wilmington have lost a friend with the untimely death of Mitch, and his loss will be felt by everyone who had a chance to meet him or work with him.

David J. Fitzgerald

Dear Larz:

I'm getting pretty bored with the weekly newsletters from the "concerned citizens" and friends of the Harold-Reed Streets area. It appears to me to be a calculated conspiracy to keep the negative letters coming. It also seems rather timely that the town should suddenly take an interest in the odor on a farm that has been in operation for 53 years.

Instead of these concerned citizens trying to put obstacles in the way of the Chisholms, why not work with them and come out with a reasonable solution for everyone involved - in the true Wilmington spirit.

As for trying to preserve our water resources, where were these voices when the five hazardous wastesites in Wilmington were listed in the paper? Were they silent because it was not an area problem? If I were the Chisholms, I'd sell the acreage to a developer who would tell you all to "get lost."

Stories from the sea

When I was a kid the most interesting storytellers were seamen who had travelled to such exotic ports as New York and Havana. Back then we took retired captains for granted, much as your kid knows there's a TV in the living room. Captains had always been here.

On one side of my great grandfather's gravestone is carved, "Lost At Sea." James Gilchrist, my grandfather, was on a boat that sprung a leak and sank off Cape Horn in the 1880s. Grandfather, being the last man to abandon the ship, had to swim ashore.

Captain Thomas, a distant cousin, had a flag clipped off when it wouldn't clear under the George Washington Bridge. A captain at 20, he started before he was 13. "I wake up around 4 a.m. when I'd hear the mate's boots clumping down the ladder," he'd say. "Before I was your age (14 or so) I'd be sent aloft--over a hundred feet--to secure something in a storm. Can you imagine working in the rigging when you've got all you can do to hang on? You'll swing way down to one side and then way down on the other side. And all the while the wind is trying to carry you away." And then he'd chuckle, shake his head and slap his leg with amusement.

All this was part of being a kid in the neighborhood. We took sea stories for granted. We knew it was possible to run from Cuba in a sailing vessel and hit the Ambrose Lightship right on the money--using only the lead line and dead reckoning. We knew what the unions did to shipping around 1900 and why captains who wanted to get home carried a pistol.

Grandfather Gilchrist, Captain Thomas and dozens of others did well. They were able to profit from a very risky business and come home to tell about it.

But could a man born before the Civil War find work in the 1980s? Imagine Grandfather Jim Gilchrist, age 40, interviewing for a job today.

A friend recommends Captain Jim to Antonio Scropo with offices in Teaneck, New Jersey, and Aruba. He climbs aboard People's Airline for the flight to Newark. As there are 124 passengers aboard and he is the only man wearing a tie, the stewardess suggests that he ride up forward in the empty first class compartment.

Waiting for Grandfather Jim at Newark is a long, black limousine and Alfred, who seems to part traffic with two puffy slits that serve as eyes.

In Teaneck, the captain steps out into a large, grassy garage and is escorted into the plush suite of offices upstairs. He learns that Scropo owns the limo service, a highly competitive business in that section of New Jersey.

He also owns a casino in Aruba and the boat. It could be used to take out passengers for a day or two at a time.

For a thousand a week, plus his own Visa card to cover expenses, Jim is contracted to skipper Scropo's ship in the waters around Aruba. The exact purpose of moving the ship or where it is to be moved are vague. Several people in South America would like to buy the boat and perhaps it will be taken there to be sold. Jim suspects the job will only last a week.

The boat is fast--it burns 80 gallons of fuel in an hour. Scropo can't comprehend how an engine can burn that much. He asks Jim how to get the best use out of the boat. Take passengers five miles out of Aruba and anchor it.

Or sell it in South America. Get your money back and buy something decent down on the Gulf Coast. Boats are cheap now. Five million dollar boats are going for half a million.

The job is vague but Scropo talks as if it will last forever. Bring your family down. That's the way they leave it.

On the way back to the airport a car darts out of a parking lot and rams the limo. Just a simple fender bender but the woman driving the car is scared. You don't ram limos in Northern New Jersey. In a few minutes Scropo drives up in a new Mercedes and asks who rammed the limo. The woman almost faints. Jim rolls down the window. It is silvered so he can see out but no one can see in. The police look the other way so they won't have to see Jim. They want to fill out the papers and get the limo on its way. They don't want to know who is in it.

Captain Thomas and Grandfather Gilchrist are long gone. Until we can raise a new crop of seamen who will return with stories that are improbable but true, I'll have to make them up.

Intern sought for Wilmington Planning Board

The planning board is seeking a graduate or undergraduate student, preferably, to act as an intern to assist in the cataloging and inventory of town owned land.

The intern will be expected to work with maps and plans and do on site inspection of properties to determine existing wetlands, typography, and soil conditions. He or she should have some environmental, urban, conservation, and engineering skills.

According to Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski, the position will be available January to September 1987. The salary range is between five and eight dollars an hour, depending on skills and experience, he said, adding that anyone interested in the job should contact him at town hall.

Referendum on Center project?

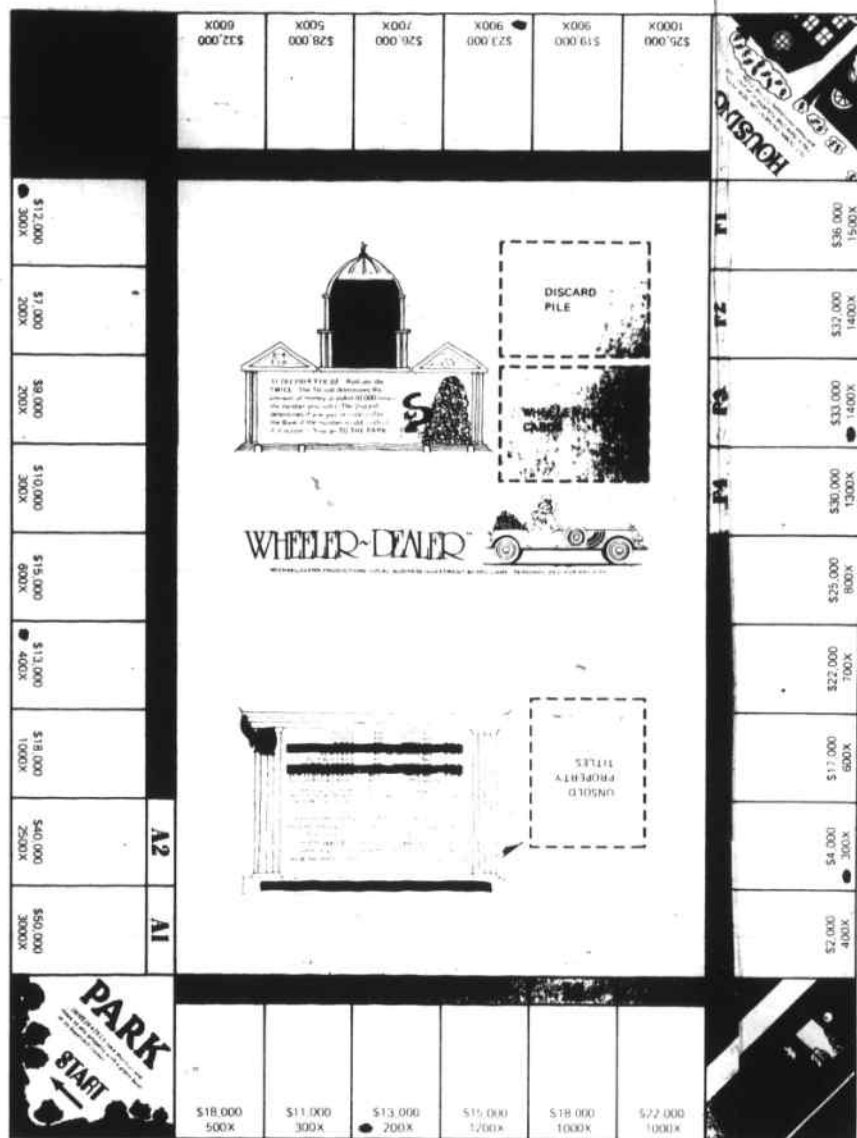

During a brief discussion of the Rt. 129-Town Center Project at Monday's selectmen meeting, Bob Doucette pushed to bring the project to the people in a non-binding referendum in the next town election.

Doucette told fellow board members he had heard a lot of pro and con on going ahead with the project. He said he would like to make sure the majority of the residents back it. Jim Stewart agreed to an extent, saying if it's a "50-50 type situation" at the public hearing hopefully slated for March, they should pursue putting the question on the ballot.

Chairman Rocco DePasquale said he was under the impression the majority of people want a change in the center. Bob Cain echoed this feeling.

"My goodness, if we're at this stage and don't expect it to be done, we're back to 10 years ago," he said. Some selectmen hesitated mentioning the referendum idea to the state DPW in case they view it as a move to delay the hearing.

In a side note, the Town Crier learned Monday that EOCB has granted the Wilmington Redevelopment Authority $17,500 to go ahead with their feasibility study on the relocation of Town Center.

The prototype for the Game of Wilmington has blank spaces on it where business names will be listed. The game will be on sale this summer at the Fourth of July Headquarters.

Wilmington's 4th of July Committee is selling the town -- just for fun

Would-be tycoons will soon have a chance to own all of Wilmington. A new board game, "The Game of Wilmington," is being developed as a fundraising project by the Fourth of July Committee.

The game will offer real Wilmington business which can be bought and sold for play money. The object of the game is to try to take over the town.

Proceeds from the game will go to support the town's July Fourth activities.

The committee is offering spaces on the board game to local businesses, with prices ranging from $150 to $500. Business spaces will go on sale Feb. 1, and are available through Ken Spinelli at 90 Woburn St., Wilmington.

Individual residents of Wilmington will also have the opportunity to have their names listed on the board for a $10 fee.

Questions regarding the game can be directed to Ken Spinelli at 657-7922 or Jim Hachey at 658-6617.

The committee plans to produce 1500 copies of the game. The games will go on sale for $10 on July 1 at the Fourth of July Headquarters.

Tewksbury Police seek approval for new computer

by Frank Bonfilio

The on-going quest for a new police computer continued last Tuesday at the Tewksbury Board of Selectmen meeting.

The Tewksbury Police went to the Board of Selectmen, seeking approval for a new police computer system that will improve the quality and efficiency of the police force in Tewksbury.

The presentation of the system was made by Selectman Coppola, Police Lt. John Mackey and Joel Carsey, president of Compudyne.

The system, called PoliceSearcher and made by Digital-Compudyne, will be able to save 20 to 30 minutes on new bookings and ten to 15 minutes on old bookings, according to Lt. Mackey. Other potential features were the time saved on investigation and dispatching and the availability of full information on suspects which may be obtained by an arresting officer. The system would also save 500 man hours per year and eventually pay for itself in two to three years, he said.

The system consists of a two-megabyte system, disk drive, 25 terminals, 11 video monitors and 4 printers. The total cost of the system will be around $62,500 including the training cost for the men.

The selectmen considered financing the computer system by private donations, grants, and the possible adoption of a system of fines for false alarms which are now received by the police central alarm system.

Lt. Mackey said that, with the use of this system in the police department, it will get the officers back onto the streets faster to better serve the public.

The selectmen agreed to table the issue until a later date.

Land swap discussed

The possibility of swapping land by Arlene Avenue for town owned land along the North Woburn line was brought up at Wednesday's Affordable Housing meeting.

Carl Backman told members he felt the idea might have some merit since residents in the area are opposed to IMG's plan to build a mixed rental apartment complex in their neighborhood. He said he felt the land in South Wilmington, which has access to a main street and sewer line, has "good potential for multi-unit development."

Chairman Jim Stewart said one reason for the formation of the task force was because of IMG's proposal. Vaughn Surprenant suggested they first find out if IMG is still going ahead with the project, in light of the new tax law's effect on limited partnerships.

Tewksbury subdivision approved

The Tewksbury Planning Board this week gave its approval to Kevin O'Brien's proposed 5-lot subdivision off Foster Road, near the intersection of Shawsheen Street and Patten Road.

Work on the "Term Terrace" subdivision is expected to begin sometime around June of this year, O'Brien said.

The Monday night public hearing before the Planning Board was a continuation of an earlier hearing, which was suspended at the board meeting of Jan. 12. A complaint was made at the earlier meeting that a culvert under the access road had collapsed, resulting in a back-up of water. Designer Rich Cuoco this week agreed to have a second 24-inch pipe installed under the road, to improve the drainage.

Another concern of the Planning Board was the waste disposal for the subdivision. At the Jan. 12 meeting it was suggested that a sewer line could be run under Heath Brook, to connect with the town sewers. Cuoco disagreed, stating that a "siphon" would have to be placed under the brook because of the local topography, and that the gravity feed would not be enough to keep the siphon working.

The Planning Board instead agreed to O'Brien's plan for septic system installation on the house lots.

Other conditions set by the Planning Board included a waiver of underground utilities. O'Brien said the utilities will be installed above ground. The board also agreed to allow sidewalks on only one side of the road through the subdivision, and allowed the placement of a fire hydrant in the center of the cul-de-sac at the end of the road.

The subdivision must also receive approval from the Conservation Commission, due to the proximity of Heath Brook.

The Conservation Commission hearing on Monday night is also a continuation of a previous hearing. The Term Terrace subdivision was scheduled for a public hearing before the Commission on Jan. 20, but neither O'Brien nor Cuoco showed up in time for the hearing.

Selectmen renew video game licenses

by Arlene Surprenant
A request to renew 15 automatic amusement devices and obtain licenses for another 15 was approved with conditions at Monday's selectmen meeting in Wilmington, despite alleged violations by license holder Joe LaCreta.

Two weeks ago, Police Chief Bobby Stewart recommended that the board not renew the licenses because of complaints and violations at Big Joe's establishment on Main Street. He claimed that though LaCreta only held licenses for 15 machines, during 1986 he had as many as 30 devices in his place at one time. He also maintained the place was used as a hangout and complaints had been received from several people.

On Monday Chief Stewart said, after at least two meetings with the owner, he was now satisfied that LaCreta was being "very cooperative" and he would recommend approving both the renewals and the issuance of new licenses. He added that because he changed vendors in December, 1985, LaCreta was never sure how many machines he had operating at one time and he didn't realize he had to license the extra machines.

"It was an oversight on my part," admitted LaCreta, who reiterated what Chief Stewart said. He assured the board that "anything that has to be done I'm willing to do."

Selectmen were unsure of what steps to take next. Though regulations don't cover the issuance of fines for violations, at least one member felt LaCreta should pay a fine. When asked, LaCreta agreed to reimburse the town $750 or $50 each for the 15 additional machines used in 1986. When LaCreta sought 15 more licenses for 1987, Jim Stewart balked.

"This seems to be a contradiction of what we should be doing," Stewart said, adding that in light of past violations, granting new licenses at this time almost seems like "rewarding" LaCreta. He suggested monitoring Big Joe's for at least three months before they approve more than 15 devices.

Chairman Rocco DePasquale said he, too, was concerned with "the reputation the place is receiving" and complaints he had received from parents.

He moved that since the problems seem to be cleared up to the police chief's satisfaction, they grant licenses for 30 machines with two conditions. One condition would require a quarterly review of Big Joe's. A second asked LaCreta to provide selectmen with a floor plan showing the location of the 30 machines.

Selectmen voted four to one in favor of the licenses with the understanding they would be revoked if any other violations or problems occur on the premises. Jim Stewart cast the only dissenting vote.

Council meets February 2
The February Council on Aging meeting will be held in the function room of the Buzzell Senior Center, Monday, Feb. 2, starting at 1:30 p.m. The Council meetings are held on a monthly basis to update the seniors on business that has been undertaken by the Council throughout the month and to open up the meeting for guidance and suggestions from seniors in attendance.

Seniors should be interested in the direction they wish the Council to go in to meet the needs of all of us. At the meetings, issues are put to a vote by the Council members and passed or rejected. Throughout the month we hear complaints with regard to the affirmative vote of the Council members with no discussion from the floor on issues before they vote. The Council members vote to accept a motion when they feel it is the wish of all the seniors. The meetings are held for your benefit. So try to attend and voice your opinion. Do not complain afterward if you did not attend.

Last distribution
We will be holding our last distribution of cheese, butter, and rice in February. To qualify for these commodities the board of nutrition requires us to ask for proof of participation in the following programs - food stamps, fuel assistance, Supplemental Security Income, Medicaid, (low income health coverage), veterans benefits (low income benefits) or if you select the income level. You must fall within the second level of fuel assistance, i.e. a household of one, $8,040; a household of two, $10,860. If you qualify under any of the above programs or income levels, call the Senior Center at 658-2258 or 657-7595 giving your name, telephone number and how you qualify and under what program.

This is not for the Center to put aside the commodities for you to pick up at your convenience. To receive the commodities it will be your responsibility to read the column and go to the center on the day of distribution.

We have been instructed by John Rafferty director of the board of nutrition at the Department of Health, Education and Nutrition to see proof of qualification before giving the commodities. If you are a shut-in and request another person pick up for you, we were told they have to have the proof with them. Any senior who feels they are being discriminated against or humiliated by these rules or have received moldy cheese or rancid butter on previous distribution should send a letter to John Rafferty, Board of Nutrition, 100 Hancock St., Quincy, Ma.

Changes in eligibility

It is important that the elderly are aware of the changes in eligibility standards for Supplementary Security Income. Too many of our seniors are trying to survive on less than $400 a month. Beginning January 1, 1987 the resource limits have changed to $1,800 for an individual and $2,700 for a couple. The income limits have also changed. For a person 65 or older the income has been raised to $488.82 and for a couple $731.72. A blind person $509.74 and a couple $997.48. A disabled person $474.93 a couple $710.06. If an applicant falls into more than one category you may qualify for a higher SSI payment. Also to your benefit if you qualify, you immediately receive Medicaid coverage, which provides full medical care coverage including prescriptions drugs, and you qualify for fuel assistance and food stamps automatically. If you feel that you may qualify contact the Social Security Office in Lowell.

And a big mortgage

Two cows, a blind horse and 100 acres

Copyright © 1987
by Capt. Larz Neilson

Pop and Ma Neilson, of whom stories have recently been told in this paper, came from near a town named Vestervig, in northwestern Denmark. Like many other people at that time, they left Europe to become a part of America.

Christian and Stina went directly to East Woburn, where she had brothers (the Madsen family). They arrived in Woburn about 1885. With them was the first born, Carl. Born in East Woburn were Dorothy, Edward and Sarah.

After a few years in East Woburn they bought a farm on Chestnut Street in Wilmington. Today the farmhouse is the Charles A. Rooney home, next to Hillside Way. But there was no Hillside Way in those days. It was on this farm that George and Clara were born.

The farm was, and is to this day, "The Old Farm" in Neilson family lore. It was bought from a Mr. Goodrich, who wanted a home in Woburn. It was sold in 1907 to a Mr. Herrick of Winchester.

Along with the farmhouse there was a barn, two cows, a blind horse and a big mortgage. There were about 100 acres of land.

The children shared in the household chores. Carl had a morning milk route in Woburn. Eddie would hurry home from school to be the janitor of the South School. For this he was paid 50 cents a week. Everyone worked in the garden and in the home.

The late LeRoy Bedell (father of today's Bedell Brothers) always had a story to tell, of the first time he saw Pop.

He had been put to work, digging the family garden, by his father. The Bedell family lived on Chestnut Street.

Along came Pop, (then known as Christian) with a plow in back of the wagon, which was being pulled by the blind horse. He saw LeRoy, digging.

Pop got out, and hooked the plow to the horse. Without a word he plowed, in a few minutes, what LeRoy would have spent several hours in digging--the back yard garden. Then Pop left, with his young neighbor pleased but wondering at the unexpected kindness.

Eddie became a star athlete in the then Wilmington High School, a wooden building which was called the Center School when it was torn down a few years ago. Eddie played baseball, football and basketball. Basketball was played in the then Town Hall, across from the Congregational Church.

Eddie pitched for the high school baseball team. He could handle a mean baseball. He became so important to the team that the members would go down to the farm, after school, to join in the weeding and other chores that Eddie had to do, so that he could return and take part in the games.

How that high school team made out in its games is not known. But, a few years later a Silver Lake baseball team was formed, which had Eddie as a pitcher, and which travelled all around, via streetcar, playing all other teams it could meet.

For a period of two years that team won each and every game in which it played. One of the reasons was Eddie's ability to handle a spitball.

Another family in the area was the Allen family, members of the Methodist Church. That family invited the Neilsons to participate in a prayer service to be held in the Allen home. The consequence was that the Neilsons became members of that church.

Some years later, Christian learned that the Methodist ministers were appointed by the Methodist bishops.

He had left the Danish Lutheran church because there the members of the clergy were appointed by a bishop. It was not this idea of a democracy. But Pop didn't say much about it.

It was in the spring of 1899 that Stina put an advertisement in the Boston Evening Transcript, for summer boarders. No one realized it but that was the turning point in the Neilson family fortunes.

For the next eight years "The Old Farm" had summer boarders. That made a big difference in the family fortunes.

Then one afternoon Eddie came home to tell that the Union Ice Company wanted to sell the farm the company owned at Silver Lake. The company had owned the farm since about 1876 because of the ditch between Lubbers Brook and Silver Lake. Through that ditch lake levels were controlled, and thus ice cutting operations.

The Union Ice Company, with 14 ice houses at what is now the Town Beach at Silver Lake, sold ice in Boston. The ice was shipped by freight car, via the Boston & Maine railroad.

The farm price was $2,000. As has been remarked more than once in later years the boy, Eddie, was the man to scout out a bargain.

The purchase of "The Elms" as the farm was known, was a very fortunate decision. Stina had an ideal summer boarding house, and Christian had a farm from which he could sell vegetables without having to make trips to the Boston markets.

A kitchen, not an original part of the farmhouse, was promptly moved away, and the building was enlarged. There were additional rooms and a larger kitchen. Everyone did his part to convert the old farmhouse into a summer boarding house.

George and Eddie built a tennis court, at the corner of Harnden Street and Main Street. Near the barn was a carriage shed, with a hard maple floor. In that carriage shed, decorated with Japanese lanterns, dances were held, to music played on a Chickering piano.

The old Henry Harnden mill, then still standing, was torn down. Christian built a rustic bridge covered with grapevines where the mill had been. There were settees, where two persons could sit and watch the ducks in the brook, if that was what they wanted to do. Of course there might be other things to do than watch ducks.

Loyal customers from The Old Farm spread the word, and the summer boarding house prospered, as did the farm as well. The younger members of the family did their part.

Clara, born in 1896, was 11 when the family moved. She was light in frame and very blond. The summer boarders loved to have her with them as they rocked on the front porch.

For the other children, busy at work, that wasn't quite fair. But possibly Clara was doing her part, in being a delightful hostess for the summer guests.

Pop and Ma ran that summer boarding house for about 20 years until the time came for retirement. Even then, for the last few years, The Elms was run by daughters and daughters-in-law.

It was when Ma Neilson died, in 1933, that the impact of her 1899 decision to take in summer boarders was really learned.

Nineteen thirty-three was during the Great Depression, as it was known. Money was very scarce. To each of her six children, in her will, Ma left the sum of $6,000, cash.

Pop died in 1936. That year has been described as the "middle of the depression." Carl, the first born, was executor. He put up the farm, about six acres of land, and houses, for a sale price of $4,000. It was not until 1940 that a sale was made.

Special Town Meeting

Tewksbury voters pay the bills

by Bill Conlon

Tewksbury voters last week settled a number of issues facing the town, but other problems were left unfinished at the Special Town Meeting.

Some 357 voters braved the cold weather to attend the Special Town Meeting, held in the high school gymnasium. According to the Town Clerk, 32 non-voting visitors were also in attendance.

Voters at the meeting agreed to pay the wages of two new police officers, buy a new van for the dog officer, and replace the video equipment which was stolen last month from the high school. The voters also agreed that the town would cover more than $210,000 in unpaid bills owed by the town.

But some issues were left unsettled at the meeting, including the funding for rubbish disposal for the remainder of the fiscal year, which ends June 30.

While the Board of Health had asked for $536,563.18 for the town's trash disposal account, the voters agreed to pay only $350,109, which could leave the account short by about $186,000.

"This is our best estimate of the funds we'll be contractually obligated to pay," said John Lu from the Tewksbury Board of Health, referring to the higher figure. The town is in the second year of a 20-year contract with the North East Solid Waste Committee (NESWC) trash-to-energy plant in North Andover.

Finance Committee chairman Tom Boyle pointed out that there wasn't enough left in free cash to cover the $536,563 requested. The evening began with $596,000 in unspent money in the town budget, but funds transfers made earlier in the evening left only $350,109 to spend on trash disposal, Boyle said.

Selectman Bill Hallisey stood up and vehemently defended the underfunding. The cost of dumping trash at the NESWC facility continues to rise, he told the voters, and about half of the 21 other member communities are not paying their share.

"You and I are suffering," Hallisey told the assembly, proclaiming that it is time to "sit these people (at NESWC) down and dictate to them."

Hallisey asked the voters to let the Board of Selectmen "fight it out" with NESWC. The assembly agreed to the $350,109 amount, in defiance of the Board of Health budget estimate.

Public Health Director Bill McMenimen later expressed caution when asked what the budget shortfall would mean.

"Honestly, we don't know what will happen," he said.

The bills from NESWC are paid as they arrive, McMenimen said, and it is now just a matter of paying the bills until the money runs out. The funding approved by the voters will completely pay the contracted cost of having the Canelas firm haul the town's trash to the NESWC plant, he said, but the amount set aside for dumping the rubbish at the NESWC plant could fall short.

Since the NESWC dumping cost fluctuates wildly, McMenimen said, "we just could squeak through the year with that money."

The voters agreed earlier in the meeting to pay more than $25,000 to NESWC's parent firm, Mass. Refus-tech, owed on last year's trash disposal account.

In other town meeting action, the voters agreed to transfer $12,221 from free cash to pay for a new dog officer's van. The transfer request was voted down at first, but a vote to reconsider the request was approved, allowing further public discourse about the issue.

"We now have an emergency," said Bill Hallisey between votes. "We don't have a van." Charles Coldwell, chairman of the Board of Selectmen, also made a push for the new van.

The voters finally agreed to the funds transfer, voting 216 to 44 in favor of the reconsidered request. A voice vote was enough to approve the rest of the article, completing the transfer of funds.

Also approved by the voters was

Pop had apple trees near the barn. There were 26 trees bearing several varieties of apples south of the barn, where the driveway to the town hall is today. In the fall, when apples were being picked there was always a barrel near the barn door, so that visiting children could have their choice free of charge.

There was a Blue Pearmain on the north side of the barn - an ancient tree which bore a rare variety of apple. It was a hard winter apple, blue in color. It would be stored away for several months before being considered suitable for eating.

Small boys didn't necessarily agree. About the first of October, on the way to school in the morning small boys would knock Blue Pearmain apples out of the tree, using stones.

Those apples, bruised by the stone which struck them, and by the fall to the ground, would be stored in the nearby carriage shed until the afternoon return from school. By that time the apple juice would be a delicious cider.

A lot of those apples would never be properly picked by Pop or an employee. They were gone before that day arrived.

Pop cared for his trees, always pruning them every winter and spraying to prevent various afflictions. But, in the 1920s a variety of diseases began to spread around on the trees of the county, and the trees just failed to bear good apples.

Pop blamed Mrs. Thompson, who never had her trees pruned. It wasn't her fault. The time had come when trees just did not bear good fruit any more.

There were some nice cherry trees, over the wintertime pathway down to the bridge over Lubbers Brook where snowslews were such fun. There were currant bushes on the north side of the hill. Black, a red and white currants, and gooseberries, two long rows of them.

When the berries became ripe, little girls would get a job picking them. The pay was five cents a quart, and Pop sold them for 10 cents.

Those little girls probably ate more berries than they delivered to

And a salty bowl Apple trees & currant bushes

Pop. About 1920 the U.S. Department of Agriculture ordered that all currant or gooseberry bushes be destroyed, in any area where the White Pine tree grew. Those bushes were alternate (every other year) hosts to a disease called White Pine Blister. The disease did not kill the bushes, but it did kill the pine trees.

Pop lost a lot of wonderful fruit bushes that year.

Probably the biggest joke in the Neilson family was one pulled by Sarah on April 1, 1912.

Pop's brother Peter was boarding at The Elms, while he built his home, a cement block and fieldstone home, across the brook on Glen Road. Both Pop and Peter liked to have a plentiful dish of oatmeal for breakfast, and often it was Sarah who did the cooking.

They each would smother the oatmeal with sugar, before starting to eat.

On that particular date Sarah dumped all the sugar from the sugar bowl and substituted salt. No one ever forgot the explosion that came from those two brothers.

the transferr of $10,500 to hire two new police officers sometime in April.

"Of all the departments that were underfunded at the Annual Town Meeting," said FinCom chairman Boyle, "the police salary account suffered the most."

Selectman Bill Hallisey said the funds transfer would get the two officers "from the police academy and put them on the street within a few months."

The agreement to fund the two patrol positions was a compromise, however.

At the selectmen's meeting on Tuesday night, the board agreed to support the patrol officer positions and dropped a proposal to create a "drug enforcement officer" slot, with the rank of police sergeant. The article asking for the $10,500 funds transfer was approved on a voice vote, and a different article calling for the sergeant's position was withdrawn.

The voters also agreed to pay $22,426 to replace video equipment stolen from Tewksbury Memorial High School in December. The funding request, however, included $1,000 to buy a steel security door for the high school Media Center.

School superintendent John Wynn was asked why the video equipment was not insured against theft, and he stated that the insurance costs would be too expensive.

"We're insured for vandalism," Wynn told the voters, "but not for theft." Selectman Hallisey took a turn at the mike to explain why the school equipment was uninsured.

"Just picture the amount of equipment in the school system," said Hallisey, "and think of the premium." Hallisey described the insurance cost as "outrageous."

School committee member Bill Emerson echoed the selectman's comments, stating that the insurance cost was determined to be "prohibitive."

The voters agreed to fund the entire recommended amount, with part of the $22,426 going toward the purchase of the security door. Entry to the Media Center during the alleged burglary was gained by smashing through the existing wooden door. The argument was made, and the voters apparently agreed, that the security measures would be cheaper than insurance.

The meeting, which was called to order by the Moderator at 8 p.m. on a frigid Wednesday night, was finally adjourned at 12:52 p.m.

Current major defense contracts include the Peacekeeper (MX) reentry system and vehicle programs and several anti-armor munitions programs.

McCard has also served as vice president, Operations responsible for engineering, advanced technology and procurement/manufacturing operations. Prior to that position he held various engineering and managerial assignments including chief engineer. In 1982 McCard was named vice president and general manager and president in 1985.

McCard received his B.S. and M.S. degrees in electrical engineering from the University of Maine and Northeastern University, respectively. He earned an M.S. in management from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology as an Avco-sponsored Sloan Fellow.

sled. It snowed the night before that. The wind blew so hard it almost knocked me over. We played until midnight playing on our own sleds. The next day we went for a ride, but the traffic was backed up about 10 miles. When we got home, our kitten was buried in the snow, but we freed her from the cold weather. But, when Santa came that night the kitten was shivering, so he put a blanket on her and she stopped shivering.

Moonlighting

My favorite television show is Moonlighting. It is on at nine o'clock on Channel four. It is on Tuesday nights. The stars of this show are Bruce Willis and Cybil Shepard. Moonlighting is about a detective agency. Bruce and Cybil are always fighting about something. My favorite episode was when Cybil and Bruce got stuck on the murder train that Miss Tapestry was supposed to take. The murder train is supposed to be fun, but people got accused of a "real"
murder instead of a "fun" murder.
I like this show because I think it is funny the way Bruce teases Cybil all the time, and how funny they are as a couple.

McCard honored with Firepower Nat'l award medal

Harold K. McCard, president of Avco Systems Textron, was awarded the Firepower National Award Medal from the Picatinny (NJ) Chapter of the American Defense Preparedness Association (ADPA) at their sixth annual Firepower Awards ceremony in December.

As over 600 attendees watched, General H.A. Miley (retired) presented McCard with this honor. The award recognizes significant contributions to the defense of the United States. It also highlights the continuing need for insuring a strong national defense.

McCard has also served as vice president, Operations responsible for engineering, advanced technology and procurement/manufacturing operations. Prior to that position he held various engineering and managerial assignments including chief engineer. In 1982 McCard was named vice president and general manager and president in 1985.

McCard received his B.S. and M.S. degrees in electrical engineering from the University of Maine and Northeastern University, respectively. He earned an M.S. in management from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology as an Avco-sponsored Sloan Fellow.

McCard is a member of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics (AIAA) and the AIAA's Technical Committee on Management, as well as the Picatinny Chapter, ADPA, Senior Advisory Board.

ON YOUR FEET

Plantar Warts are a common skin growth usually confined to the bottom of the foot and toes. It is presumed that warts are caused by an infection of the skin with a virus. These lesions are usually painful, due to an increase in blood and nerve supply. Viruses, unlike bacteria and germs, are not cells. They need the aid of the body's own skin cells to reproduce and in the process cause a lesion. Treatment of these lesions is considered essential so as to prevent their spread. Techniques for treatment are varied and depend a great deal on the doctor and the art he chooses to exercise. In our office we use the laser, the most recent and to date the most successful way of dealing with plantar warts.

Wildcats
top Andover

The Wilmington High School girls' basketball squad recorded their fourth win of the season with a 51-45 victory over Andover Friday night. Clockwise from bottom left: Guard Leigh Hastings (14 points) looks for an open teammate; coaches Doreen Thibault and Susan Rowe survey the action from the bench; Hastings picks up her dribble before a pass; and the talented WHS guard fires a bounce pass. Karen Andersen is the leading WHS scorer this season.

Redmen stun Lowell

The Tewksbury High School Redmen engineered the biggest upset of the Merrimack Valley Conference basketball season when they nipped the Lowell Red Raiders, 68-67 at the Lowell High School Field House Tuesday night.

The victory was the second straight for coach Bob Melillo's team, their fourth conference victory and their eighth victory overall going into Friday night's key game at Wilmington High School.

Lowell (11-2), rated fourth in Division One, suffered their second one point upset loss of the season having fell to Central Catholic, 61-60 earlier this year.

This stunner could serve as just the push that the Redmen need to qualify for their first tournament berth since 1975.

ST. JUDE, THANK YOU

Dear St. Jude:
Please take time out to listen.
Time out from helping so many of our friends.
Listen to people whose lives you have touched.
People who want very much to say thank you.
People whose families are more loving.
Whose hearts have been healed.
Whose bodies are stronger and don't hurt so.
Whose unsolvable problems got solved.
Whose impossible cases faded away with a prayer.
St. Jude, thank you so much.
Our dear God has given you so much of His love.
We are so grateful and
We promise to pray for others and
To let them know how dear and how good you are.
And please know how much we love you.
Tell all of our family and friends in heaven
We love them too.
And, St. Jude. Pray for us

Outdoors column

by Bill Conlon
Three more local ice fishing tournaments went off as planned last weekend, despite the sometimes bitter temperatures haunting the area. Two area men managed to place in the money in each of the events on Sunday.

The Crystal Lakers annual contest on Lake Mascuppic in Tyngsboro, on Saturday morning, while Super Sunday saw tournaments on Lake Attitash in Merrimac, and on Long Pond in Tyngsboro. Busy times.

With teams of fishing tournament results, and a sports editor who raises his eyebrows at overly-long Outdoors Columns, herewith are presented the results in condensed form. With luck, some sagacious sports scribe will one day invent a system of providing line scores for fishing tournaments, much the same as baseball line scores.

Sat., Jan. 24 -- The Crystal Lakers' first-of-two annual events got underway on Lake Mascuppic last Saturday morning, on a rather nippy and windy day. The ice was thick and safe but the surface was sloppy, due to recent snows.

The sign-up tally on Mascuppic topped out at 115. All winners in the Crystal Lakers' event received cash and a trophy, and the winners were: $200 to Bill Blaisdell of Chelmsford, 3-pound-15 bass; $100 Leo Bergeron of Tyngsboro, 3-pound-14 pickerel; $75 Brian Corneliore of Dracut, 3-pound-11 pickerel; $50 Gary Bibery of Andover, 3-pound-9 bass (18 1/4"); $25 Steve Nolet of N. Chelmsford, 3-pound-9 bass (17 1/2").

Sun., Jan. 25 -- On Super Bowl Sunday, two different events were offered to local anglers. Merrimac Bait and Tackle in Merrimac, Mass., held a tourney on Lake Attitash in that town, while the Club Fleur-de-Lis in Tyngsboro held its annual derby on Long Pond.

A total of 327 people signed up for the Attitash event and the winners were: $600 to Dan Parkhurst, Haverhill, 8-pound-2.5 pike; $300 Fred Peva, Derry, N.H. 6-pound-4 pike; $200 Dan Viger of Merrimac, 5-pound-14 pike; $150 Philip Sokolowski of Wilmington, 3-pound bass; $100 Alex Cole of Merrimac, 2-pound-9 bass;

(The following anglers won $50 each, and all caught pickerel) Steve Giardini of Merrimac, 2-pounds-7; Dan Phinney of Billerica, 2-pounds-2; Ron Rondeau of Nashua, N.H., 2-pounds-1/2; Rick Rizzotti, 1-pounds-11; Jim Wentworth, Amesbury, 1-pound-10.

The Long Pond derby, held at the Club Fleur-de-Lis, Tyngsboro, had a small turnout due to the better-advertised Attitash event. Prizes were awarded separately for Bass, Pickerel and Off-species.

Bass -- $75 to John Lyko (with help from Frank Charette, both from Dracut), 13-ounce bass; $50 to Don Dunn Jr., Tyngsboro, 12-ounce bass; $25 to Gordon Lutz, Tewksbury, 10-ounce bass.

Pickerel -- $75 to Don Dunn, Tyngsboro, 4-pounds-6; $50 to Ken Calden, Pelham, N.H., 4-pound-2; $25 to Keith Regan, Pelham, N.H., 25-ounce.

Off Species (all horned pout) -- $75 to Eric Kaupila, Lowell, 25 ounces; $50 to Keith Regan, Pelham, 22 ounces; and $25 to Mike Balch, Dracut, 21 ounces.

Congratulations also go out to the Kurs brothers of Tewksbury for pulling down door prizes in the Club Fleur-de-Lis tournament.

- Tackle Box -

Quite a few more ice fishing tournaments are scheduled for the upcoming weekends, including two next month in Tewksbury.

This weekend will find many local anglers (like me) on New Hampshire's Lake Winnepesaukee for the annual Pepsi derby, which is offering up to $100,000 in cash and goodies. Sign-ups will be in Meredith, N.H., at the Rotary Club trailer on the shore of the big lake.

The Greater Lowell Fly Fishers will be hosting two tournaments on Lake Attitash, one this weekend, Feb. 1, the other a week later on Feb. 8. Headquarters will be at the public boat ramp on Attitash Road, off Route 110 in Merrimac, Mass.

(The best fishing spot on Attitash, according to a few recent prize-winners, is on the far side of the lake, nearest the dam. A few big pike have been hauled from that location. Now you know ...)

Other tourneys on Attitash will be the Northeastern Lunkers event on Feb. 15 and the Buzzard's Luck contest on Feb. 22.

The Crystal Lakers will be holding their other annual derby on Feb. 15 on Crystal Lake in North Chelmsford. Sign-ups will be held at the Legion post on Route 40 in N. Chelmsford, across from Marty's bait shop.

The Tewksbury Youth Center is hosting a fishing tourney on Ames Pond, Tewksbury, on Feb. 14 starting at 7 a.m., with half the entry money going out for prizes. (The more the merrier!) Also on Ames Pond will be the annual S.W.E.A.T. tournament, set for Feb. 22.

A BIG outdoors exposition begins tonight at the Worcester Centrum and runs until this Sunday, Feb. 1. The 11th annual Eastern Fishing & Outdoor Exposition will offer just about anything that a plaid-shirted type could ever want. There will be fishing and hunting equipment exhibits, fly-fishing seminars, live eagles and hawks on display, and even (on Saturday afternoon) the Massachusetts awards presentation for the biggest fish caught in 1986. The expo hours are 4-10 p.m. Wed; 2-10 p.m. Thurs. and Fri.; 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Sat; and 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. Sun. Entry fee for the expo is $2 for youngsters and $4.50 for big youngsters.

Wilmington girl qualifies

Kristina Przyjemski, 14, of Hillside Way, Wilmington has qualified for the United States Gymnastics Federation, Class III, Compulsory State Competition, to be held at Algonquin Regional High School in Northboro, on February 15.

Kristina has had a good first half of a year competing in the Class III Competitions. She is a very strong competitor and really helps her team along. Kristina scored the following in each event: Vault, 9.15; bars, 7.75; beam, 7.00; floor, 8.60.

This gave Kristina a much deserved all-around score of 32.50. The qualifying score is a 32.00.

Currently she competes for Montvale School of Gymnastics as a Class III gymnast in the U.S.G.F. Region Six.

TMHS track pesky

TMHS boys

"We may not win the Small School Division, but the team that does win it will have its hands full with us," said assistant coach Bill Piscione.

Top runners and point getters this season are (by event), Eric Meininghaus (hurdles, and HF relay), Kenn Coviello (50, relay), Ron Maddox, first season (300, relay), Tim McCaffery (1000 and relay), Dave Kelleher (mile and HG), Bob Bush (two mile and relay). Bush and McCaffery have lost but once.

Solid backups are Jeff Frietag (hurdles), Matt Morse, much improved, (50-300, relay), Jim Avery (hurdles, 300), Brian Sturtevant (mile), Tom Hooper (mile), Keith Bennett (600-1000), Ed Melanson (hurdles), Bill Donahue (300), Karl Bateson (300), George Haslam (600-1000), and Matt Boucher. Jeff Masse (600) and Mike Pifalo are improving with each meet.

Freshmen doing well are Kevin Kelley (mile), Chris Sands (50), Jim O'Callaghan (two mile), and Eric Muller (50).

The Shot Put Club of Jay Kelley, Bruce Taylor, Manny Gonsalves, Joe Kelley and Matt Boucher are always competitive.

The boys have lost to Lowell, Chelmsford and Billerica, all big schools. They have defeated Greater Lawrence and Haverhill for their two and three overall record thus far. Upcoming meets will be all small schools - Wilmington, Methuen and Greater Lowell.

Kimberly Hoon

Wilmington woman at Maine Maritime Academy

Strange as that may seem to some old salts, the formerly all-male bastion, the Maine Maritime Academy is now in its 12th year as a coeducational college.

After more than 30 years of educating men for maritime careers, academy officials decided in the early 1970s that it was time to look for a few good women. Finding them wasn't easy, according to Capt. William F. Brennan, assistant to the president.

"Traditionally, the marine business has been viewed as a male domain, particularly in the U.S.," he says. "Because of that, we've had difficulty attracting female students. The women who do come here, however, have been very successful, and they've earned their place in the industry, at sea and ashore."

"As the first military or maritime college in the nation to admit women, I'm proud to say that Maine Maritime has played a big part in opening those doors."

Although female representation in the regiment has leveled off at five to 10 percent, women have kept pace with and, in some cases, have surpassed their male counterparts. Their grades match those of male students, and they've won academic and military honors out of proportion to their numbers.

An example is Susan Clark of Norridgewock, the highest-ranking student in the class of 1984, now a deck officer with Exxon Shipping.

She wasn't the first female valedictorian at Castine. That distinction belongs to Deborah Doane Dempsey of Kilmarnock, Va., a 1976 graduate who was the first woman to enter the academy. Now a chief mate with Lykes Bros. Steamship Co., she recently became the first woman in the history of the U.S. Merchant Marine to earn a captain's license.

Today's enrollment of 475 midshipmen includes 15 women, representing five states and 11 Maine communities.

Kimberly Hoon of Harnden Street, Wilmington, also a senior, agrees that cadet shipping is a time of discovery. She sailed from Panama to New Orleans and Boston aboard the tanker 'MV Ogden Hudson.' "I learned that I like the sea," she says. "When you're out there, you're on duty all the time. You're a vital part of the ship and everyone depends on you. When you get home and you're away from the job, you're totally away. It's a lifestyle that appeals to me."

Hoon says it was Maine Maritime's engineering program, the ocean, and the small town atmosphere that attracted her. But making it through a male-dominated college, she points out, can be a challenge.

"You put up with a lot of grief. There's a superwoman expectation...wear the uniform exactly right, be bright and cheerful, show up at all the social functions, and, of course, put up the decorations."

"This may sound trivial, but one thing that really irritates me is that guys always ask me about detergents, as if I'm supposed to be some kind of expert. How should I know?

"Over the four years I've been here, I've learned that you have to speak up or you're going to get stepped on. I'm nobody's babysitter and I'm not here to be a substitute mother."

A marine engineering technology major, Hoon is a member of the school's chapter of the Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers.

She talks with confidence about her future: "When the subject is propulsion or electricity or refrigeration, if you know what you're talking about--and I do--and if you can be decisive and delegate authority--which I can--then I think that good jobs will always be there. When a company hires me, it won't be because I'm a woman; it will be because I can get the job done. Period."

Some other examples of Maine Maritime women:

- Kathleen Chesley Knight, a design engineer in San Francisco.
- Teresa Lapp, a naval officer in Hawaii.

At least 10 female graduates--of the 30 who have earned their degrees since 1976--are daughters, sisters, or nieces of Maine Maritime alumni. Occasionally, women enroll at the academy after graduating from other colleges. Recent examples include alumnae of Colby College, the University of Vermont, the University of California at Berkeley, and the University of West Virginia.

Charles Zaroulis, for the purpose of discussing the problems of sewage flowing between houselots at Grasshopper Lane. The board seeks to have the discussion in executive session. There seems to be a feeling on the part of the members that the problem could end up in court.

As has been reported in this paper, there are underground pipes going from one houselot to another in the Grasshopper Lane area, and those pipes, or some of them, may be distributing raw sewage to other properties.

The Board of Selectmen, through its chairman, Charles Coldwell, notified Mr. Zaroulis of the problems on January 21.

Chairman Joan Dunlevy of the Board of Health says she wants to "sit down and talk it over with Charlie."

Wilmington police news

During the week ending January 27 Wilmington police officers responded to 20 accidents, 36 alarms, made eight arrests and two protective custody detentions.

Other departments were assisted, medical assistance was rendered, one vehicle was reported stolen and one stolen vehicle was recovered. Alert neighbors reported an incident of suspicious activity, one break and entry was logged and two domestic problems were quieted.

Four complaints involving trailbikes were taken along with a traffic complaint and five incidents of vandalism are still under investigation.

New officers

Three new officers from Wilmington graduated from the Recruit Academy on January 13. Charles Fiore, Paul Chalifour and James Hanlon completed a 14-week academy course administered by the State Police for the Mass. Criminal Justice Training Council. They are now assigned to regular shifts on the department.

Arrests

Tuesday morning Officer Pat King went to the Billerica House of Correction to arrest Keith Rogers of Heritage Drive, Tewksbury, on the basis of a default warrant issued for possession of narcotics. He was taken directly to Woburn Court.

Two men were arrested shortly after noon on Tuesday after they were discovered drinking in North Wilmington. Gregory Day of Landen Avenue, Lynn, and Paul Crisitelli of Keys Drive, Peabody, were charged with public drinking and later with possession of a class D substance believed to be marijuana. They were taken directly to Woburn District Court for arraignment. Sgt. Palmer and Officer King made the arrests.

Wednesday morning at 1:15 a Tewksbury man was arrested after Wilmington officers responded to a request by Tewksbury police to assist them in stopping a car. Officers Bob Richter and Paul Chalifour arrested Thomas O'Keefe, 31, of Nichols Street, Tewksbury, charging him with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol, speeding, reckless operating, failing to keep to the right of the road. O'Keefe will have his license suspended at arraignment after blowing a .22 on the breathalyzer.

Friday afternoon a Westford man was arrested by Sgt. Palmer and Officer Jim Cuoco after an investigation of larcenies from a local company. William Goodwin, Brookside Road, was charged with larceny over $100. Goodwin was an employee of D&D Lock Company. He was accused of taking company merchandise for his own use. Company officials are researching records to determine the extent of thefts.

Friday evening Officers Neville and Fiore went to Billerica PD to arrest Edward Toscano of Brown Street, Billerica on the basis of a default warrant issued for failing to appear at arraignment at Woburn Court on a drug charge.

A Tewksbury man was arrested by Medford police and turned over to Officer Chris Neville Saturday night. Edward Smith of Chandler Street, Tewksbury was held for the weekend on the basis of a capias warrant issued by the court.

Pleasant surprise for Tewksbury

The NESWC bill to the Town of Tewksbury is suddenly pleasing. Tewksbury had a balance of $1,679.10 (money to its credit) at the end of January.

The NESWC bills have worried several of the town officials now for several months. Large sums of money were due to the firm that burns refuse in North Andover, and converts the trash into electricity. Some selectmen were wondering, out loud, how the costs could have risen so much.

Instead of owing a large sum of money at this time, Tewksbury has a credit (money owed to the town) of $1,679.10. The Board of Health on Monday night stared at the bill almost in a state of disbelief.

Tewksbury paid $55,199.40 for its service fee for December 1986. That was one of several large checks that had been paid.

The January 15 statement showed that the actual service fee was $48,454.90. Tewksbury thus had a credit of $6,199.40.

The estimate of the January service fee is $5,065.40. No payment is due, and Tewksbury at the end of the month will still have a credit of $1,679.10 to apply to its February bill.

William McMenimen, public health director, referring to the remarks that had been made about the 1986 bills, said: "If we can have a couple of more months like this, we might be able to get by!"

Then, with a sort of reference to the dumping problems of many other communities: "What ever happens to NESWC you have to realize that this is the best place in town."

Suburban Arts has delightful school program

By PHYLLIS NISSEN

Madame Curie, Chief Red Dawn, and Johnny Appleseed are infusing new meaning into traditional lessons at several local schools — to the delight of students, teachers, and parents. Their inspiring performances typify the abundance of stimulating programs being made possible in a growing number of towns by the West Suburban Creative Arts Council, an example of parent-school cooperation at its finest and networking at its most effective.

Expanding steadily beyond Boston's western suburbs since 1978, the WSCAC now consists of two parent volunteers from each of about 50 communities. The group meets five times a year in Waltham to share evaluations, opinions, experiences, and ideas about in-school cultural/artistic programming.

President Diane Munini of Winchester says, "The key to the council's tremendous success is the outstanding opportunity it provides for networking. Information-sharing doesn't just end at meetings. It filters down to enrichment committees in each town and to the staff in each school."

"Members come to a meeting with a certain amount of information, and they leave with twice as much."

The "smorgasbord of information" generated by those meetings is available to members at any time. The WSCAC provides a forum and support group for parents and educators who believe that art, in its broadest sense, is a vital part of each child's education. Collaboration and flexibility are vital aspects of the group.

Although the word "network" seems to be overused these days, the WSCAC stands out among networks because of the close attention paid to every aspect of its operation. Dealing as practically as possible with much that is fanciful, it is a bonanza of down-to-earth, creative information-sharing techniques.

This month alone, any member has the option of attending 59 performances in schools from Medfield to Marblehead, on subjects from Mother Goose to alcohol education.

Closer to home, Burlington, Reading, Stoneham, Wakefield, Winchester, and Woburn belong to the WSCAC. Examples of enrichment areas available to these towns are magic, music, and mime; writing/illustrating, rocket/space flight, sign language, and Northwest women. Science programs are considered part of the arts, offered for their subject/performance components.

Philosophies and funding differ from school system to school system. One town might hire a magician for an entire week; another might stick to "entertainment" immediately relevant to curriculum. Enrichment is sometimes funded directly by a town school committee or available only as part of a principal's budget, depending on the town. Money also comes from PTAs, school improvement councils, and trust funds.

Yearly $15 membership dues entitle towns and private schools to send one delegate and one alternate to meetings, and to receive one mailing. However, members "in name only" do not remain members for very long. Responsibilities, including a 12-point job description, are quite clear and closely adhere to the following central philosophy: "The basic commodity that the Council deals in is information; if you don't bring it in — then we have nothing to share. This is a co-op operation; everyone must contribute to make it work. The $15 does not entitle members to sit home and receive the information others have gathered; the membership fee entitles you to participate in the Council."

The many responsibilities of membership contribute directly to the many rewards. The WSCAC assists its volunteers by giving them access to a calendar of performances, resource file, "blockbooking," and fundraising information.

Network policy encourages members to preview a performance before booking it. They invite each other, through a calendar, to observe programs and to see for themselves what would best fit into their towns.

Munini says, "Even though we don't advertise, our size increased dramatically last year because of word-of-mouth. With so many programs around, there is a great need to review them qualitatively. Someone might hire a bad performer based only on that performer's own brochures and ads — but that kind of thing happens only once."

Meetings are used for un-written evaluation. Rachel Baumgartner, from Reading, attributes the council's success to the willingness of every single member to voice his or her perceptions at and after meetings.

She says, "The sharing and cooperation are phenomenal. People bend over backwards to be fair. They'll include the fact

Last day of work for Stoneham librarian

By JIM ROUILLARD

An essential local cataclysm has occurred.

The event, felt most strongly in Stoneham, was almost in the nature of an earthquake.

Its epicenter first appeared in Burlington, but the shock waves continue to spread throughout Eastern Massachusetts and beyond.

Maxine Schultz, Burlington native, resident, and reference librarian par excellence, has retired from the Stoneham Public Library, giving rise to literal weeping, and no small gnashing of teeth.

Yet stating, baldly and by itself, that Schultz has retired is something like reporting that Buffalo Bill is defunct. It is a concept too big to take in all at once.

The cliché may hold true that you have to have known Maxine Schultz and her talents to understand why her departure is such a sadness.

She has prodded wandering dilettantes, served as midwife at the birth of some books, and helped to bring — among other things — exhibits of antiques, science, art, medicine, technology and local archaeology to thousands.

A remarkable and talented woman, Schultz had been at the Stoneham facility a mere 14 years — short time to have touched so many.

Yet she is a person whose life and works provide a telling example of the rippling effect of individual actions.

Though unable to equal the claim of the woman who made national tabloid news by giving "Birth to a Space Alien's Baby," Schultz HAS provided help in obtaining declassified information for "Clear Intent," a highly regarded study of UFO's co-authored by Stoneham's Barry Greenberg. And that's just one example.

A superbly trained researcher, reference librarian and director of special exhibits for the Stoneham Library, Schultz' humanity and love of people have always enriched her work. She has helped discover and bring to the public hundreds of exhibits, ranging from modern miniature rock bands to ancient embroidered Chinese purses and 19th-century potions and pills.

Whether encouraging

someone to learn Greek, or tirelessly rooting out obscure periodicals from somewhere, anywhere, and sometimes seemingly nowhere, in the Eastern Massachusetts Library system, Schultz has served a

Stranded in snow

FM TALK: Our far-flung correspondent was stranded up in ski country during the last blizzard. While his trusty friend, St. Bernard (not the dog, by the way), goes to his rescue, you readers are left with something from his files, to and behold! another edition of those off-beat tidbits on American history, to keep you busy:

Can you imagine spending most of your life wanting to become president of the United States, spending a huge chunk of your hard-earned fortune striving to become president, finally becoming president, and then after realizing your dream, dying of a heart attack before having a chance to truly accomplish anything of importance and being remembered as the first president to drive an automobile? Well, that was exactly what happened to President Warren G. Harding, our 29th president, who lived long enough to complete only two years of his first term in the White House.

Norman Thomas, who once worked as a newsboy on the Marion Star, which Harding published for thirty-five years before making the trek to Washington, D.C., grew up to become the leader of the American Socialist party. Harding's best friend, Thomas made six unsuccessful attempts to become president.

Harding's sudden death while in office came as a surprise to the nation, but it may have been preventable, if Harding had listened to his heart specialist, Dr. Emmanuel Libman. Libman observed Harding at a party eight months before he died, and told the president that if he didn't take better care of himself he might not live another six months. Harding ignored his doctor's recommendation, and eight months later died of a massive coronary.

In the book, "The Story of Advertising," by James Wood, it is noted that Lucky Strikes, during the 1920s, advertised that cigarette smoking was good for your health. In fact, their ads went on to say that beautiful women could "keep youthful slenderness these days by smoking Luckies" instead of eating fattening sweets between meals. One of their advertising slogans was "That's why there's real health in Lucky Strikes," referring to their claim that women could stay slim by smoking instead of nibbling on fattening sweets. Their ad campaigns also stated that "Luckies steady their nerves and do not hurt their physical condition." Lucky Strikes also claimed back then that their cigarettes were "the favorite cigarette of many prominent athletes who must keep in good shape." According to the Luckies ads, those prominent athletes respected "the opinions of 20,679 physicians who maintain that Luckies are less irritating to the throat than other cigarettes." Can you imagine the backlash an ad campaign like this would create in the 1980s!

The newspaper business has always been fiercely competitive, but when pressmen walked off the job in September of 1923, the owners of ten New York City newspapers joined together to publish under one masthead. This unique edition ran on Wednesday, September 19, 1923, and its impressive masthead included the New York American, The New York Herald, The Journal of Commerce, Daily News, The Morning Telegraph, The New York Times, New York Tribune, The World, New Yorker Staats-Beitung, and Il Progresso Italo-Americano.

Perhaps the most eccentric president ever to live in the White House was Calvin Coolidge. He was also considered a bit sadistic and very stingy. One of the most infamous stories illustrating the former involved a Secret Service agent whom the president asked to bait a fish hook for him. Just as the agent was about to place a worm on the hook, the president yanked the line, catching the agent's finger on the hook and drawing blood. As for his stinginess, Coolidge always demanded the change back from money he'd given to servants to purchase newspapers for him. Whenever a servant failed to return the change, Coolidge would wander through the White House mulling that one of the servants owed him, say, seven cents. Coolidge, who enjoyed having his head rubbed with Vaseline while eating breakfast in bed, lived modestly before and after his term in the White House in one half of a rental two-family house in Northampton, Massachusetts. After leaving public office, Coolidge became a newspaper columnist, a profession for which he was paid one dollar for every word he wrote. This added up to $200,000 a year, which was three times his salary as president. Coolidge was not, however, ever regarded as a brilliant newspaper columnist.

The Roaring Twenties have always conjured up images of wealthy businessmen with slicked-back hair and wearing pinstriped suits while smoking expensive Cuban cigars and escorting gorgeous women into smoky speak-easy bars. It was supposedly a decade of bubbly prosperity and care-free decadence. But the reality of the twenties, according to the Brookings Institute, was this: in 1929, a year when actually only a handful of people made fortunes in the stock market, only 2.3 percent of the American families earned an income in excess of $10,000. Another eight percent had incomes higher than $5,000 a year. Of the remaining population, 71 percent survived on less than $2,500 yearly; 60 percent on incomes less than $2,000, while 21 percent made less than $1,000 a year. All this translated into the stark reality that, while many envisioned the twenties to be a decade of prosperity, approximately seventy percent of the population at that time lived near or below the poverty line.

"Men have a much better time of it than women. For one thing, they marry later, or another thing, they die earlier."

students, authors, historians, writers, researchers and the general public.

One local resident who requested anonymity said he first met Maxine Schultz on her first day at the Stoneham Library.

"Expressing a passing, dilettante's desire to study ancient Greek," he said, "I was astonished to find her, five minutes later, handing me a book of basic Greek grammar.

"I was so stunned (and a little embarrassed) at her prompt readiness to take me at my word, that I smiled with forced enthusiasm and checked the book out. I had absolutely no intention of ever opening it."

Did he go on to become a Rhodes scholar studying classical Greek at Oxford?

"Not quite," he said. "I never opened the book — and sneaked to the bookdrop one night so I wouldn't be seen and quizzed on it. But I did decide to make studying, teaching and writing languages my life and profession."

"Along the way I've even managed to pick up a tiny smattering of Greek — but I can never think of classical Greek without thinking, fondly, of Maxine Schultz."

It's easy to imagine that Schultz may have had a similar catalytic effect on many. Yet her enthusiasm, unlike the anonymous scholar's, is never feigned — and her encouragement is always genuine.

"It's as if she gets a kind of personal reward from helping research other people's projects," commented Mrs. Jack Farquharson, widow of a former member of the library's board of trustees, at a recent reception held in Schultz' honor.

"Maxine is one in a million. And it's painful to imagine a Stoneham Library in which her distinct presence and style will not be available."

"Is she one of a vanishing breed? Well, I hope not. But her unique competence and enormous personal warmth will be missed. She'll be really hard to replace."

Muriel Farquharson's feelings are echoed by many, including this writer. And probably because of the strength of those feelings, it is difficult to find a worthy tribute for a woman who has helped so many so well.

Yet somehow, song lyrics keep intermingling with the good thoughts we have of Maxine Graham Schultz, who belongs peculiarly both to Burlington and to Stoneham.

Jack Brown ("Before the Deluge") might have been describing the particular brand of magic that Maxine Schultz wielded in her years at the Stoneham Library.

She helped us all — the dreamers and the fools — by providing, like Joan Baez, an honest lullaby, and by exemplifying in her work and her gifts, the refrain to Browne's song:

"Let the music keep our spirits high... When the light that's lost within us reaches the sky."

The memory of Maxine Schultz' magic will remain, like music, keeping our spirits high and reminding us that the light within us may not really be lost after all.

that the performance took place on a rainy Monday morning or Friday before vacation so everyone will know where the audience, the performer, and the reviewer are coming from."

All members have access by phone to the council resource file containing critical evaluations and background information on artists currently performing in the schools. A minimum of three evaluation cards is expected each year from every member, and there are often 10 cards on one performer and as many opinions.

Signed evaluations cover the performer's expertise, academic content, entertainment value, audience rapport and mundane business details, such as how difficult he or she is to work with or adherence to the school's bell schedule. Members are encouraged to phone each other for more details.

Proposition 2½ makes careful spending for enrichment especially crucial. Assembly costs range from $100 for a beginner to $300. The opportunity to "blockbook" and to benefit from a reduced rate for many performances in the same area can save from $25 to $100 per performance.

Sometimes new artists even come to a school for half price if they are guaranteed council members from six to eight other towns in the audience.

Speakers explore any possible opportunities for funding the arts. In addition to providing information on available grants, the council offers an extensive list of creative, often simple fundraising ideas which raise from $300 to $3500 — like a freezer-ready bake sale, non-scary haunted house, one-day plant sale.

The council also assists other school systems to set up their own organizations to support creative arts. Advice covers the most minute details, such as automatically including a map of the town with a performer's contract to simplify everyone's arrangements.

Most participating schools now take advantage of the ability to preview performances. Baumgartner says, "The calendar and ability to blockbook have saved us a tremendous amount of money. Teachers are very enthusiastic about the assemblies. The performers love the extensive publicity they get."

Why do volunteers dedicate so much time and energy to the WSCAC? They firmly believe that the arts are important to intellectual, emotional, and spiritual growth. But even more than that, they all agree — they are doing it for the children.

Stone Zoo needs volunteers

The animals at Stone Zoo have their own story to tell — and they need a Zoo Guide to help them tell it. Stone Zoo is looking for community volunteers to become an essential element of bringing in-depth and exciting information to the public.

By watching "Major", the polar bear, you can see his fur covered feet stepping silently and then imagine him well camouflaged, stalking seals in the snow-covered tundra. But did you know that each of his hairs is a hollow solar collector, trapping the warmth of the sun, enabling him to survive harsh Arctic conditions? As a zoo volunteer you'll learn these and other fascinating animal stories.

Training prepares new Zoo Guides to communicate the world of animals to Zoo visitors. Animal behavior, adaptations, diets, habitats, and teaching techniques are all a part of these comprehensive classes. It's free. You only pay with interest, enthusiasm, and time — a rare opportunity. The 10 weekly classes begin February 6. To receive more information call the Stone Zoo Education Department, 438-5100.

The world's wildlife needs you to speak on their behalf. Help them by helping the Zoo deliver its significant conservation message. It's a great feeling to know that you can make a difference.

His most recent book: The Making of An Underachiever: Growing Up in the Shadow of Success — which Dr. Pecaut completed in August 1986, focuses on the theme that the success of the father and the underachievement of the son are linked together and rooted in issues prior to the son's birth. The personal driving force behind his national practice and work is the goal to bring the father back into the American family.

Seven Austin Prep Russian students recently spent a weekend in New York City exploring the city's Slavic neighborhoods, restaurants, and cultural attractions. James Smith of Reading, Jason Craven of North Reading, Ronald Passerini of Billerica, and Tewksbury residents Joseph Connolly, Michael Byrnes, Eric Szmyt, and Stephen Ramsay took part in the field trip, which was sponsored by Austin's Russian program.

An unusual feature of the trip was a guided tour of A La Vieille Russie, an expensive Fifth Avenue shop which specializes in antiques and jewelry from Imperial Russia. The local students examined precious Faberge items, some of them valued in six figures, while an experienced salesman described their history. The atmosphere of Imperial Russia was also apparent at the Divine Liturgy celebrated in Slavonic at the Russian Orthodox Cathedral on Park Avenue. Enveloped in clouds of incense, the students stood amid ancient icons and scores of burning candles as the church's bishops concelebrated the Eucharist.

More contemporary in feeling was a visit to Brighton Beach in Brooklyn, a neighborhood sometimes called "Little Odessa by the Sea." This section of Brooklyn, reached by a long subway ride from Manhattan, has become a center for the third wave emigration. In the last fifteen years thousands of emigres, many of them Soviet Jews, have made this area a lively Russian neighborhood. Russian is heard everywhere on the streets, and the Austin students visited Russian grocery stores and shops, and dined in a restaurant specializing in cuisine from the Caucasus mountains. Walking along the boardwalk at the beach, with the rides of Coney Island visible in the distance, the Austin students saw dozens of Russian grandparents relaxing in the sun, conversing with each other in Russian or walking their grandchildren.

The weekend tour also included visits to the exhibit of Faberge Russian Easter Eggs at the Forbes Building, A Russian bookstore, and many of the cities more usual tourist attractions. One highlight was an unexpected meeting and conversation with famed folk singer Peter Yarrow, whom the boys met in an Upper East Side Russian cafe. A Broadway show and Vespers sung by the renowned boys choir of St. Thomas Church rounded out the weekend.

The participants in the New York trip took part last year in a similar visit to Washington, D.C. Each year the Russian students of Austin Prep visit a different American city to explore its Slavic heritage. According to Russian Club President Jason Craven, the students are thinking about a visit to Chicago or Montreal next year. The club is also planning a tour of Russia and Europe for this summer.

SOLOSAILOR

Dodge Morgan, the first American to sail alone and non-stop around the world, will be at the Peabody Museum of Salem on Tuesday, February 3 to present his exciting new film, "Around Alone." The filmed account of his record-breaking voyage will be shown at 8 p.m., and a reception with Dodge Morgan follows. Admission for this very special evening is $25 for museum members, $35 for non-members and will be by advance ticket sale only.

Fifty-three year old businessman Dodge Morgan had promised himself that he would, one day, sail around the world solo and without stopping. Filmed underway using six automatic cameras, "Around Alone" is the story of the realization of that goal.

Totally isolated, Dodge must cope with gear failures, the wild gales and seas of the Southern Ocean, and other days of no wind and no progress. Confronting these challenges he finds new strength to persevere.

This is the second midwinter sea adventure to appear at the Peabody Museum of Salem. The first, "Northern Light's Arctic-Antarctic Voyage," was a sellout. Don't miss the opportunity to meet solo mariner Dodge Morgan and see his breathtaking new film. Call 745-1876 for reservations and information.

EXERCISES FOR EXPECTANT, NEW MOTHERS

Registrations are now being accepted for Winchester Hospital's new prenatal and postpartum exercise program, which will begin Monday, February 2.

The exercises are offered by the hospital's Rehabilitation Services Department in conjunction with the Women's Health Services Program and are ongoing. The sessions will be held Monday and Thursday evenings from 5:30 to 6:30 in the Kingsbury Seminar Room.

Barbara Reed, P.T., director of Rehabilitation Services, encourages potential participants to get or stay in shape by stretching and strengthening muscles through gentle aerobic activities. Prenatal exercises can begin anytime one's obstetrician gives approval. Mrs. Reed added, noting that they usually begin around the end of the third month. Post-partum exercises are advised for at least three months after delivery.

Fees are $5 per session, or blocks of ten for $40 or 20 for $70; a one-time $10 registration fee includes a physical therapy evaluation. Expectant mothers will be asked to present signed approval from their obstetrician. To register, call 729-9000, ext. 3250, between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m.

LARRY UNGER, Winchester-based multi-instrumentalist, will be performing a solo concert at The Kookaburras Coffeehouse in Jamaica Plains on Sunday, Feb. 8.

Unger goes beyond musical boundaries

By CRAIG HARRIS

Incorporating traditional music from around the globe and early-20th century jazz and ragtime, Winchester-based multi-instrumentalist Larry Unger obscures the borders between music idioms.

Born and raised in Detroit, Unger had little interest in music as a youngster. "I came from a very non-musical family," he says. "I didn't even listen to the radio until I was in high school."

His musical interests, however, began to reveal themselves while he was attending the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor. "A lot of friends played guitar," he remembers during a recent interview. "I used to watch guys in the dorm play and I would try to teach myself the chords that they used. I didn't know about the blues or that anyone fingerpicked."

At the time, Ann Arbor was a hotbed of acoustic and folk music activity. "There was a coffeehouse," Unger recalls, "called The Ark where I heard David Bromberg and Andy Cohen, who was the first person that I heard fingerpick. There was so much music. I heard The Boys of The Lough. I heard Mike Seeger playing southern fiddle tunes. I heard ballad singers, cajun groups."

Besides trying to teach himself to play by listening to records, Unger attempted to transcribe piano ragtime pieces to guitar. "I spent a lot of time playing from piano books," he says.

After graduating with a Bachelor's Degree in Business, Unger moved to Nashville. "Although I hadn't played for money yet," he explains, "I wanted to be around music."

Six months later, Unger again felt inclined to move. "I knew that Boston had had an active folk scene," he says, "but, by the time I had got there, most of the coffeehouses had closed."

Nonetheless, the move proved to be a turning point in Unger's musical career. "I heard three people," he recalls, "that influenced my playing — Pete Kairo, Guy VanDuser and Eric Schoenberg."

Eventually, Unger took lessons from VanDuser and Kairo. "I learned a couple of Guy's arrangements," he says, "but I didn't really figure out what he was doing until later. I learned Pete's repertoire — marches, piano rags — and applied it to my own style."

Before long, Unger began performing on open mic nights at local coffeehouses. These led to gigs at such places as The Nameless Coffeehouse and The Sword and The Stone. "(Pete) Kairo had me back him up a few times," he remembers, "and he would let me play a few tunes on my own."

Unger

Although most of his work is as a soloist, Unger has been involved with several larger ensembles. As a member of The Mandala Folk Dance Ensemble, he had to learn to play a variety of international music on banjo and mandolin. "People came to dance," he explains. "I played while they danced. We performed in France, Sweden and Canada. Our repertoire included music from many different cultures. Bulgarian music is very rhythmic and is played in unusual time signatures like 7/8 or 9/8 time. Swedish music is very graceful, almost like classical music. Rumanian music is played at a very fast tempo and uses a blues-like scale."

In 1980, Unger joined the Boston Excelsior Mandolin Society and pursued his interests in turn-of-the-century American music. Although the group, which combined rags, Sousa-type marches, Schottish, waltzes, two-steps, cakewalks and novelty tunes — was only together for two years, they were, according to Unger, "a local success. We had a guy who played in the classical banjo style," he says, "and we had a guy who sang tenor really well."

When Unger began to record his debut solo album in 1984, it seemed fitting that his choice of material would span his many musical interests. The resulting album, "Rags, Blues & Hot Tunes For Fingerstyle Guitar" features solo and small group arrangements of rags (Scott Joplin's "The Chrysanthemum"), blues (Blind Blake's "Police Dog Blues") and jazz standards (Ray Noble's "Cherokee" and Duke Ellington's "Mood Indigo"). There's even a traditional Rumanian fiddle tune, "Calusarii," that was adapted to guitar.

"I didn't want to just make a guitar record," Unger explains, "but I wanted to put it into the context of a band. I wanted to use the best musicians that I could get, people like Peter Barnes (piano), Allan Block (fiddle), Billy Novick (clarinet) and Kim Wallach (vocals). I wanted to put together the kind of band that you'd find at a dance."

After the album was completed, Unger tried to secure the interest of several record labels. Eventually, however, he decided to release the album on Wallach's independent label, Black Socks Press. Although it benefitted from the label's distribution contacts, the album was essentially self-released. "I put up all the costs," Unger says, "and I get back all the money."

When the album was released, Unger quit his full-time job and took a position as a guitar, banjo and autoharp teacher at the Music Emporium in Cambridge. "I teach a lot of theory," he says. "It's a real short-cut if people can understand what's going on musically. I get my students — most of whom have never played before — to improvise. It makes them much more self-sufficient. I try to expose them to a lot of different music."

He's also continued to perform at folk music clubs and coffeehouses. Last September and October, he undertook a tour of the midwest and the south. He's also taken several trips to Europe. "I make phone calls like crazy," he says. "I send out a lot of records. It takes being very persistent. Touring isn't the most lucrative profession."

Since 1978, a good deal of Unger's material has been original compositions. "I started with a rag on the guitar," he recalls. "It was very classical piano-rag sounding. I started playing around with it and it turned out to be something that no one had done before. If you play enough, it just comes together. When an idea comes, it's very easy. It just takes the first phrase, the first couple of measures. I've been writing a lot of waltzes lately on piano. I have a few swing tunes, a few jazz tunes, rags, reels. "Los Altos Hills" is a cross between a blues and an Irish tune. If I pick up an instrument that I haven't played in a while, I get very inspired."

Unger has continued to accept freelance work in a variety of musical styles. "I just did a joint concert," he says, "with clarinet player Bill Tomczak."

Unger will be performing a solo concert at The Kookaburras Coffeehouse in Jamaica Plain on Sunday, Feb. 8. For further information, call 522-3303.

Book will help to locate vital records

Vital records are just that...vital. We need access to them.

In this age of bureaucratic documentation, everyone has need of copies of records of birth, death, marriage or divorce. An application for benefits from the Veterans Administration or Social Security, a passport or marriage license must have the information contained in these records and sometimes copies of the records themselves.

All these records are stored permanently by municipalities, counties, states and the Federal government.

The Consumer Education Research Center, a national non-profit consumer group, found that there was little uniformity on where the records are kept by the city and in others by the county or state. To further complicate matters, often older records are held in a different place than current ones. In addition, the addresses where the records are kept are changed quite often.

The consumer group found many people had difficulty in locating the records they needed. In many cases it was necessary to make expensive long distance calls just to find out where to write, what information was required and how much money to send. For that reason CERC is publishing a book entitled "Guide To Locating Vital Documents" which contains a state-by-state listing of the addresses and telephone numbers of where each record can be found, the cost of a copy of the document and sample form letters containing all the information needed to get these and other vital documents.

For those whose records are in foreign countries there are instructions on where to write for birth and death records of U.S. citizens as well as birth records for alien children adopted by U.S. citizens.

Robert L. Berko, executive director, of CERC says that originally the book was published to satisfy the needs of persons applying for various benefits but many others have found it useful. He has received letters from libraries, coroners, law enforcement, social agencies, credit grantors, collection agencies, stock ownership tracers, lawyers, persons searching for missing heirs and even those interested in searching their family roots. All these and others have found use for a book that helps them locate and prove the status of individuals.

Many times documents can be used to prove things other than what they record. For instance, one woman wrote to the group telling them that a birth certificate for her child proved her residence at that time in the United States and helped her in efforts to become a citizen. To obtain a copy of this useful book, send $4 to CERC, Documents, 439 Clark Street, South Orange, N.J. 07079.

Trends: Day care and fitness

This new column will detail events in the Greater Middlesex East area as well as Eastern Massachusetts that pertain to new business developments or practices. Press releases and notices are welcome. Please send to William Pacino, care of this local newspaper.

Day Care benefits

North Shore employers interested in providing Day Care for employees attended a breakfast seminar on that subject recently. The Employer Health Planning Service of the North Shore Health Planning Council hosted the breakfast held at Howard Johnson's in Danvers.

Guest speakers were Anthony Sapienza, vice president of manufacturing, Grieco Bros. in Lawrence, and Nancy Toso, Child Care Circuit, Lynn.

Grieco Bros. opened its on-site Day Care Center a little over one year ago and has 53 toddler and kindergarten children enrolled. Plans are under way for an additional number of infant care slots in the near future.

Nancy Toso provided useful information about off-site methods of offering Day Care to employees. She pointed out the rewards employers reap by including Day Care as a benefit included lowered absenteeism, increased productivity, and higher employee morale. Both Mr. Sapienza and Ms. Toso stressed the importance of total commitment to Day Care by top level management.

Among those present were representatives from GTE, Sylvan, Varian, The Gorton Group, Morton Thiokol, American Mutual Insurance, Parker Bros., MITRE Corp, as well as several area hospitals.

The Employer Health Planning Service of the North Shore Health Planning Council sponsors one to two breakfast meetings each month on varying topics of interest to North Shore employers. For a list of seminar schedule for 1987, call the Council office in Peabody, 531-7006.

Home fitness centers

The latest trend in health and fitness is no longer membership in health clubs, but the creation of personal fitness centers in the home. A variety of fitness equipment that was once accessible only in health clubs is now available for home use.

A source for this equipment is National Fitness Store, 125 Main St., Stoneham. Rowers, exercise bikes, treadmills, weights and exercise accessories are among the many items available for sale. Free local delivery and service of equipment, along with personalized attention, are among the services which this specialty store offers.

Visiting Nurses provide care, compassion

Home health aide Donna Griffin of the Visiting Nurse Association (VNA) of Middlesex-East enters patients' homes five days a week to provide their personal care. "I give some of my patients a tub bath or shower, others a sponge bath in bed. I shampoo their hair. Sometimes I make their lunch and keep them company while they eat."

And as Griffin enters people's homes she also enters their lives. "My patients tell me their problems," she says. "Those who live alone are often lonely and look forward to my visit as a social event. Others have family problems and look to me for moral support."

The VNA has been bringing compassionate health care to patients in their own homes for 85 years. Today, VNA services include nursing; physical, occupational, and speech therapy; nutrition counseling; social work; and home health care.

"We would like to commend our home health aides for their great contribution to patients in our community," says Jacquelyn Deegan Galluzzi, Executive Director of the VNA. "Home health aides are really the cornerstone of our service. They augment and support what the other staff members do, and their energy and level of commitment are immeasurable."

Griffin visits patients in the community served by the VNA of Middlesex-East, which includes Burlington, North Reading, Reading, Stoneham, Wakefield, Wilmington, Winchester and Woburn. "Some of my visits take an hour; others two," she says. "One of my patients is blind and crippled with arthritis, so she needs a lot of special treatment. It takes me two hours to complete her personal care because she is so frail. I give her a total bed bath because she can't get in the tub. I put warm soaks on her knees and rub her legs with lotion. I shampoo and set her hair. I never hurry. We talk and we laugh the whole time."

Another of Griffin's patients is a 37-year-old retarded woman living with a sister who works full-time. "I meet her when she comes home from day care, give her a snack, and help her with a shower," says Griffin. "We have fun together until her sister comes home from work."

According to Griffin, the work of a home health aide is hard, but very satisfying. "I really feel like I'm helping people," she says, "and I enjoy the independence that home health care gives me. As an aide in a nursing home I was never on my own. With the VNA, I have my own schedule and my own responsibilities."

"I also find that patients seem to do better when they are cared for at home. With the new restrictions on Medicare, patients are not in the hospital as long as they used to be, and home care has become much more important."

N.E. Rehab has a pizza night

Convalescing patients at the 200-bed New England Rehabilitation Hospital, Woburn, dream of happy times and they voted for a pizza night...in place of regular formal dinner, on Wednesday, Jan. 28.

Aiming to please, Virginia Behn of Lynn, Director of Therapeutic Recreation, has planned a giant pizza party in the main dining room complete with a pizza store front, red and white checkered table cloths, red and white striped jackets for servers, and "Skimmers" or old-fashioned straw hats for the men servers.

Quiet Cool

Short Takes

Quiet Cool Starring James Remar, Adam Coleman Howard, Daphne Ashbrook, Jared Martin, Nick Cassavetes. Directed by Clay Borris. Produced by Robert Shaye, Gerald T. Olson. Written by Borris and Susan Vercellino. Rated R (intense violence, profanity).

Revenge is a theme that is getting flogged to death in trashy action pictures these days, and Quiet Cool does nothing to deviate from the norm.

The setting is the Pacific Northwest, otherwise known as "the dope capital of the Northwest." Big time "growers" are raising huge crops of marijuana, and using Gestapo-like tactics to keep the locals in order. You see something they don't want you to see, you die.

Enter a cool cop from New York City who wears tight jeans and, of course, drives a motorcycle. He has come to visit an old girlfriend whose brother is missing and she thinks something is "wrong." Blonde hair and tight clothing count for more in these movies than brains.

There we have the two sides, and there the story sits, a classic case of boredom. The film's roots are in Westerns, director Clay Borris proves that adding gore does not add excitement, and while the final shoot-out may be bloodier than those we've seen in true Westerns, it is certainly not as edgy and tense as it should have been. Also, the low budget is apparent from the onset, and the film is not helped by its overall dinginess.

The idea behind this flick really was decent and it's too bad this was the result. There is some basis to the story, as big-time dope farmers have popped up around the country, especially in California. And, the filmmakers had a menacing villain in Nick Cassavetes, well, at least he looks menacing — they don't give him that much to do. Cassavetes, the son of John Cassavetes and Gena Rowland, has popped up a few times in similar roles and does leave an impression. It would be interesting to see what he could do in a real movie.

Short Takes

There is esthetically gorgeous, with its minimalist sets and eery, incandescent lighting. But there is no denying that this biopic about St. Therese casts a dubious light on her lifestyle. One can't help but walk away thinking that she was a fanatic, and that the Carmelite Order was more perverse than holy. No rating. * *

Critical Condition could be the death of Richard Pryor at the box office, since he bears the brunt of the painfully boring movie. There isn't a successful sight gag or joke in this ambulatory flick that is sort of about a con man, mental patients and hospital administration. Rated R. * 1/2

Wanted: Dead or Alive has all the earmarks of a successful action flick as Rutger Hauer is icily convincing as a modern day bounty hunter going after terrorists. Unfortunately, the writers ended up with another Rambo clone and Hauer got lost in the shuffle. Rated R. * *

Bedroom Window is a true homage to Hitchcock, as this thriller takes an innocent man and forces him to break the law to prove he's not a murderer. Steve Guttenberg will have you on the edge of your seats as he stalks the rapist/murderer who set him up. We know whodunnit, and so does Guttenberg, but the fun comes in as we watch him go after the creepy redhead who has been terrorizing the women of Baltimore. Rated R. * * *

Native Son is an intense and emotional adaptation of Richard Wright's dark novel about a black man who kills a white woman. Victor Love is searing as the hopelessly poor man who strikes out at his surroundings and is made to pay the price. The film does suffer from an almost sluggish pace, but it is full of fine performances and is just as timely as when Wright wrote it in 1940. Rated PG. * * *

Assassination lets the husband/wife team of Charles Bronson and Jill Ireland have some fun, but it would seem they made up the plot as they went along. Bronson plays a Secret Service agent who's assigned to protect first lady Ireland, but there are so many sidestepped issues and plot flaws that you'll never believe the reasons behind the assassination attempts on her. Rated PG-13. * 1/2

Platoon is unequivocally, absolutely and without exception the best war movie ever made. It makes all those Rambo, revisionist films look like the fairy tales they really are. Director Oliver Stone presents the Viet Nam War as the dirty, irrational and bloody proof that war isn't a romantic escapade. Tom Berenger and Willem Dafoe are standouts as opposing sargents, one representing civilization and the other barbarism in a movie that should not be missed by anyone over the age of 10. Rated R. * * *

Wisdom presents an intriguing idea of a modern day Robin Hood, but Emilio Estevez' first outing as a director has resulted in a schizophrenic blend of humor and drama that rings false from the opening narrative. Demi Moore and Estevez couldn't seem to rise above their off-screen personae and many of the camera shots are tight close-ups that make it look suspiciously like a movie-of-the-week. Rated R. * *

Woodchips

By ANTHONY MANCONI

Folks, please try not to tell anyone your troubles. Only five percent will sympathize with you, 80 percent aren't listening, 10 percent don't care and the other five percent are glad you have them.

Eddie Schwartz is a certified welder. That doesn't mean much to some people but the gas company knows the value of such craftsmen. Sometimes they work under extremely dangerous conditions such as gasoline tanks and other highly volatile liquids. They have faith however that their guardian angels will watch over them. The Archangel Gabriel for the men and Joan of Arc for the women welders.

My wife ran off with my best friend and I miss him. Dan MacMaster of Lowell told me that when Lt. Tom Jones was stationed in England in the U.S. Air Force, he received a telegram from his brother Bob, telling him that their father had died. "I can't leave," Tom responded. "Make all the arrangements and send me half of the bill." Two weeks later Tom received and then paid $2,000. He sent $45 as his half of another bill. For the next four weeks he received bills for $22.50. He thought it was strange, so he called his brother Bob for an explanation. Via Transatlantic phone, Bob said, "As you know Tom, Dad didn't have a decent suit to be buried in so I rented a tuxedo!"

George Gould is ideally suited to be a letter carrier, he has "bags under his eyes." My grandmother was 85 years old and had trouble sleeping. One night my mother gave me a cup of milk which she had laced with a little gin. "Take this up to Granny, this will help her sleep I'm sure." Granny first took a little sip, then a little more, and soon drank it all down with a flourish. She then smacked her lips, looked at me and exclaimed, "Goodness me, what a cow - what a cow!"

After working 20 to 30 or more years, you decide to retire. Good - but "don't" retire "mentally," because you can't coast very long without going downhill. Another thing, keep on the move and keep going because life is like riding a bicycle, you won't fall off unless you stop pedaling.

Remember, short visits make long friends. Will someone please tell that to my aunt Nina. Chiquita won a divorce decree claiming that she wasn't the "Top Banana" in her husband's life, but, just one of the "bunch." He "appealed," saying he may have "slipped" once or twice, but he still loved Chiquita, saying that the romance was "chilled" when she put bananas in the "refrigerator."

I understand that a copy of Woodchips is posted by Margi Lynn Stratton of North Reading in The Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y. "Bull"-e-tin Board. Margi Lynn wrote and told me that she thinks that an Arabian Princess who is a student wants to meet me. I hope she owns some oil wells, my car only gets ten miles per gallon.

There's a bigger fool than the fellow who knows it all - it's the "fellow" who will argue with him. My grandmother was hard of hearing but refused to wear a hearing aid. She used instead an ear trumpet that her grandfather used. I took her to church one Sunday and the usher took one look and said, "One toot out of that and 'out' she goes!" Terrie Catalano of North Reading, welcome to Woodchips.

I am well rewarded for the time I spend trying to think up new jokes, research material and then type this column. It affords me the opportunity to meet many wonderful people. Mr. Gerard (Spike) Boyle, I am proud to say is one of them. I met Spike about a year ago on Main Street, near Woburn Square. I was asking people if they read Woodchips. Spike's answer was a spontaneous friendly handshake and an enthusiastic, "I read it every week!" I have not seen him since that first meeting but so many people have told me of Spike's admirable attributes that I just had to let my readers know them too. His humanitarian and charitable contributions, his tremendous support for youth sports, especially the Little League, are a few of many characteristics of this fine gentleman. But this above all else is his genuine love and respect for all of God's creatures. Mr. Gerard (Spike) Boyle. Woodchips is proud of you. "God bless you."

Congratulations to Marie Diamond and Janice Guglielmi of Reading who received their realtor pins from Irene O'Neil, president of the Eastern Middlesex Board of Realtors. When my family needed a larger house my uncle John Shea of North Reading recommended a realtor who spoke with the sweetest brogue this side of Ireland. He said to my father, "Giovanni, I'm going to show you a house that's without a 'flaw'!" My father exclaimed, "Good grief, what in the world are we going to 'walk' on?"

If you marry for money, you'll probably never be happy, but as my wife Kathy says, "You'll suffer in comfort!"

Rowan Fitzgerald asked me, "Am I crazy if I talk to myself?" "Only if you listen," I replied. Bobby Burns asked, "What causes arthritis Father?" The man of the cloth, trying to scare the dickens out of Bob said, "It's caused by excessive drinking, living the life of Riley and keeping late

Grant Me Peace Oh Lord

By ANTHONY MANCONI

Grant me peace Oh Lord,
Ease the burden of my troubled heart,
Guide me on the road I trod,
Lest I'm lost in it's winding path.
Oh Lord! In this life's torrid pace,
Teach me to wait a while,
To touch a baby's angel face,
With it's ever present smile.

Let me pause in sun or fog,
To smell the flowers in the park;
Hear the croaking of a frog-
Listen to a meadow lark.
Teach me to watch and pray,
That I may take the time to see,
Your miracle wonders everyday,
A bed of roses, a lofty tree.

I pause to say a solemn prayer,
For the wonders I see today,
The sun that set late yesterday,
Just rose across the bay.
The tide goes out, but will return,
For that is the plan divine.
"Oh Lord, you are the guiding hand,
And we're every moment thine."

hours. "Tell me Bob, how long have you had it?" "Not me," Bob shouted, "I just read where the bishop has a touch of it!"

Folks, if you wish to enrich days, plant flowers. If you care to enrich years, plant trees. If you want to enrich eternity, plant seeds of honor, character and integrity in the lives of children.

We are fortunate to have so many fine restaurants in our area, where generous portions are served that have exquisite taste with prompt service. I stopped dining in Boston when I told a waiter to bring me half a fried chicken. I waited over 20 minutes and asked, "Where's my order?" "We can't kill half a chicken, sir, you have to wait until someone else orders the other half." I couldn't wait so I told him to bring me a lobster. "This lobster has one claw missing," I exclaimed. "I know it, it was in a fight." "Why didn't you bring me the winner?" I shouted. "The cook said to bring it to you, it will feel right at home with the Woodchipper, another loser!" I was introduced to Cosmo Deligio by Mr. Cataldo. I shook his hand then said, "Cosmo, you look familiar." "I know it," he said, "my mother tells me that every time she sees me." That was a gem of an answer. My dear friend Francis Guillian lost all of his hair when he was 21. "It doesn't bother me now," Frank said, "because I believe in the hair-after!"

of the Depression than a laugh-a-minute Neil Simon comedy, and is much better for being more emotional than slapstick. In this autobiographical film, Simon has laid bare his outer shell of humor to give us a warm and touching portrait of a family that isn't glamorous or has sophisticated problems, but is very real. Rated PG-13 * 1/2

The Morning After weaves an easily deciphered web of murder and mayhem as Jane Fonda, a lush who blacks out, tries to find out if she did indeed murder the man she finds herself in bed with one morning. There isn't much to figure out here, but watching the characters, especially Fonda and Jeff Bridges, stumble through a visually intriguing Los Angeles is a lot of fun. Rated R * * *

The Mosquito Coast is an almost insightful drama about a modern man who has had it with the fast-food restaurants and uncaring people, so he packs his family up and moves into the jungle. Harrison Ford plays the genius/mad man with much aplomb, but there are a few holes in the plot that leave you feeling unsatisfied, and a little bored. Rated PG * * 1/2

Little Shop of Horrors is an up-beat, be-bop of a musical that has successfully survived the transfer from a 1960 cult movie to a musical stage production and now back to a movie that is adapted from the play. The plot, about the weird relationship between a carnivorous plant and a schmucky Jewish florist's assistant isn't the key here, but the talented cast and finger-snapping songs are. The only problem is that the glitzy ending loses the gritty humor of both the original movie and the play. Rated PG-13 * * *

The Lady and the Tramp is just the cure for an ailing season of children's entertainment. While it isn't the best effort from the Disney studios, it is still a fun case of "puppy love." Rated PG * * * 1/2

Three Amigos is a happy, sappy and daffy spoof of westerns that highlights the talents of Chevy Chase, Martin Short and Steve Martin. The only problem is that it lacks substance. After all, no matter how talented the stars are, they can only tell one joke for so long. Rated PG * * *

Crimes of the Heart is a bittersweet, funny and eccentric adaptation of the Pulitzer Prize winning play, and is the best adaptation to come out of Hollywood this year. Diane Keaton, Jessica Lange and Sissy Spacek let the laughs roll off each other as three sisters who are reunited when one of them shoots her husband. Rated PG * * * 1/2

Star Trek IV: The Voyage Home is the best installment in the series as Admiral Kirk and his crew travel back in time to the 20th Century in a damaged Klingon spaceship. Laughs abound as they try to adjust to our primitive world in what may be the first ever Save the Whales comedy. Rated PG.

Open Letter to Our Neighbors

Dear Neighbors:
Terrace Realty is under new management, I would like to introduce myself. My name is Mary Ann O'Callaghan. I come to the Reading area after having been involved in real estate in the Winchester, Woburn area for many years.

Happy New Year to you all! Since January is the time for resolutions and changes, Terrace Realty is taking on a new look. In the next few months we will be enlarging our staff. We've already begun with the addition of Carol Barrett, Carol's background in real estate and her administrative abilities are going to be a welcome addition. Behind the new faces, however, there will be some very substantial changes. We've taken a good hard look at our industry. (You've probably been watching us too). Franchises are bombarding the small one or two man offices in many communities the small one or two man offices are trying to maintain the personal touch. After extensive market research we think we know what the consumer wants. We are going to rededicate ourselves to becoming a mid-sized full service real estate brokerage house. We will deliver both the professional and personalized service which guarantees a smooth real estate transaction.

Finally, we want to become your source for real estate in our area. We are in the process of establishing a small real estate lending library. If you have any real estate questions please stop in. We know you don't have to be buying or selling a home to have questions about real estate. This is our way of performing a service for you and getting to know you at the same time.

Right now refinancing is on the mind of many homeowners. We have handbooks published by the Federal Reserve Board which explain Adjustable Rate Mortgages. Please stop in to pick up a handbook or just say hello.

Sincerely,
Mary Ann O'Callaghan
